JULIA MARLOWE.

THE MATINEE GIRL.

The chorus maiden seems to be the most interesting stage question of the moment—in fact, a problem play might be written about her as she exists at present in New York.

The growing importance of the chorus maiden has been many times remarked, but it was hardly to be supposed that the evolution would culminate in the peculiar conditions that this season has brought forth.

A few years ago the chorus, while fulfilling its part in comic opera or burlesque, was always regarded en masse as a part of the stage picture. There were a great many stories told about chorus girls who owned broughams and lived in luxurious splendor, between black silk sheets which, at one time, for some reason or other, were supposed to mark the very acme of prosperity.

But the principals of the comic opera stage of ten years ago, who were then the attractions rather than the chorus, know that the truth of the matter was far different.

The Florodora sextette seem to have started the new fashion—a fashion that threatens to annihilate not only the principals, but the productions and the theatres themselves. These girls won a recognition which is sometimes described as "social." It was "social" in so much as they were entertained at dinners and suppers in private rooms in a fashionable Fifth Avenue restaurant and traveled about town in automobiles.

The automobile stands for a great deal in these days. It is as showy as a big diamond used to be and it makes more noise. Since the chorus girl has taken to the automobile the sale of big diamonds, it is said, has decreased.

But students of the drama, who watched the growing importance of the chorus, noted with amusement that, besides the palpable efforts of the press agents to announce every new recruit as a deserter from the ranks of society, there was evidenced a desire on the part of girls of education and culture to gain places in some of the theatres.

Chorus girls now apply for positions with a record of educations at college or abroad, trained voices and Delsarte or dramatic school diplomas. Above all they are not poor girls seeking a means of livelihood, but boast some sort of a set. Whether it is in Hoboken or Harlem doesn't matter—the press agent always makes it Baltimore or Washington or Philadelphia, which long suffering cities are credited with more chorus girls than ever grew in any one section of the country in one generation.

It is a mark of the degeneracy that has set in in certain matters directly traceable to the influences governing stage matters in some quarters that this so-called social prestige, usually an unpleasant sort of prestige, has come to be the dominating note in the employment and advancement of the chorus girl. The girl with the most popular following now has the best place, the finest costumes and the highest salary, irrespective of her experience or her voice.

Of late, at one of the theatres loudly advertised as a pet society project, the chorus girls have performed the amazing audacity of thanking their groups of applauding friends for applause over the footlights. This is the new type of automobile chorus girl, who has displaced the comparatively tame damsel who had big pearls and diamonds to her knuckles.

She is absolutely flung in the faces of theatregoers, some of whom still regard the stage as a means of legitimate amusement rather than as a show case for the protegés of rich men or the favorites of the johnnies—rich johnnies and poor johnnies—all of whom, however, wear the same cut of evening clothes and give the requisite "society" background.

The girl who seeks the chorus then, as a way to make a living, or as a means of stage training, finds herself not only handicapped but surrounded by conditions entirely repulsive to decent ideas.

The automobile chorus girl puffs too much. She shines like a naughty deed in a good world. Take her outside the stage, amid the glitter and glare of the midnight restaurants that she has made her own, and you can laugh at her or weep for her as your fancy prompts you—consider her fortunate or unfortunate as your ideas run.

She is well in view and well advertised and the pathos of her situation seems to strike no one. On the contrary, she is met with deep respectful silences; genuflexions of soundlessness and followed by murmurs almost of applause.

It would all be very funny if it were not so sad!

But amid the rosy lobster shells, shining under the electric lights and the band playing, she fits in the picture—a picture that hardly seems to have been made from human models, and which, if the lights went out and the dawn broke, would show up tawdry and cheap and false and unreal as a glass diamond.

But there are many who believe in the stage and defend and fight for it against attack and evil influences. Against the impure farce, the vulgar scenes that make decent people squirm, the luridly "smart" dramas used to exploit unhealthy heroines, all the varied degrading ideas that are put forth now and then to make money from the most vicious tendencies of humanity.

The automobile chorus girl, puffing about town ostentatiously tagged and superbly self satisfied, is, we shall say, humorous. In the all-night restaurants she gives the key note to the scene and becomes unconsciously dramatic.

But over the footlights, bowing and smirking to the particular man or men who promote her gay gasoline-odored existence, she is the most daring insult that has ever been offered to an audience in New York, and we have had some severe slights of that sort.

Afternoons about town one also sees the automobile chorus maidens having their late breakfasts in the various restaurants, always well attended and prettily dressed.

If one could only take her as an impression without regarding her as an individual it is easy to smile and study another of the many phases of interesting life in town.

For this particular set you cannot exactly class with the stage, for there is no serious purpose or idea lurking under one of those drooping pompadours.

It is simply a rapid mode of metropolitan existence, and the stage is only incidental to the afternoon breakfast and the midnight supper. You will notice if you visit the popular breakfasting place of the automobile chorus girl that she knows and is known to all the others, girls and men.

The snatches of talk one hears are somewhat weird. The English accent is cultivated to such an extent that the language sounds like a sort of Volapuk. The women's voices are high pitched, the conversation wealthy to affluence. Cabs, orchids, new gowns, valets and maids occur in every sentence, and the names of prominent tailors, grocers, jewelers and florists occur almost as often as those of millionaires and theatrical managers.

The nervousness of the automobile girl might seem the result of the fad she has formed for absinthe frappé. Whether she is eighteen or twenty-five this drink is ordered as thought it were soda lemonade. It is made better at this place than anywhere else in town and seems to awaken no terrors in either the consumers or the onlookers.

The French waiter will tell you if you ask him that there is no more danger in it than in milk, if taken moderately. But the men, oddly enough, do not drink it. It is the feminine beverage.

The dishes ordered consist of caviar, salads and croquettes, prefaced perhaps with a cup of consomme. They rarely dine before the theatre, after which they swarm into the gay restaurants of upper Broadway, where they consume birds and bottles, lobsters and rarebits, sometimes visiting three or more places before they sleep. It is hardly any wonder that they are extremely nervous, but the oddest part of it all is that if the excitement ceases for an hour they cannot stand it.

The pace must be continuous and kept up with wild regularity. They fail to notice that they are becoming so marked in style of manner, dress and conversation that no one could fail to place them in the category of the all-night restaurant crowd.

They have no law except that to be serious is to be slow, and that to show an evidence of tiredness is to be a "dead one," in the expressive language of the chorus.

And their language is expressive. They have their catch words and phrases repeated with boring oftenness. The stories of their actual experiences teem with odd humor, for they are quick to learn and hear nearly everything that is going. The music hall jokes, the races, the society scandals, the good stories, the rises and falls in stocks for Wall Street are very close to the chorus just now, and the stories some of these girls tell about their large winnings, to gain which they are never obliged to put up any margin, are ingenuous enough to make even the waiters smile.

And you will catch many an odd bit of Tenderloinese humor in the drift of talk. Maude is telling Charlie how Bobbie called her up on the telephone at twelve last night and asked if he might drop in and smoke a cigar, that he wasn't feeling well.

She said "Yes," but what do you think? Bobbie came down that awfully quiet block driving a hansome with the driver inside the cab. He had been in some sort of a row and he had an oyster on his eye.

He took the oyster off to show her his eye and what do you think—it was very droll—the Angora cat that Billy had given her came in and ate the oyster.

THE MATINEE GIRL.

FIREMEN IN CHICAGO THEATRES.

Fire Marshal Musham, of Chicago, means to enforce the local ordinance that requires each theatre of certain size to employ a fireman during all performances, he to be appointed by the Marshal. The ordinance reads:

Section 190 (building ordinance). It shall be the duty of the owner, agent, lessee or occupant of any building of class V, with accommodations for one thousand or more persons, to employ one or more competent, experienced firemen, approved by the fire marshal, to be on duty at such theatre during the whole time it is open to the public; such firemen shall report to and be subject to the orders of the fire marshal, and shall be in uniform and shall see that all fire apparatus required is in its proper place and in efficient and ready working order.

Corporation Counsel Walker has approved this measure and says that the authorities are empowered to close any theatre that violates any part of the ordinance.

LAWSUIT OVER FIRE EFFECT.

W. A. D. Scott, manager of Ida Fuller, has begun a suit against Frank McKee and Gilmore and Tompkins. Mr. Scott seeks to enjoin the defendants from using the fire effect in The Ninety and Nine, alleging that it is an infringement on a fire effect patented by Miss Fuller in 1900. Mr. Scott is represented by Clifton B. Edwards as counsel.

KYRLE BELLEW GETS A PLAY.

Kyrle Bellew will appear at some future date in a dramatization of "The Amateur Cracksman," by the author, E. W. Hornung, secured by him by his managers, Liebler and Company. Eugene Presbrey will make some alterations in the manuscript, that is already completed.

ANOTHER FAIR AT THE GARDEN?

It is rumored that the Actors' Fund Fair, that proved so successful when held at the Madison Square Garden twelve years ago, will be repeated there next Spring, under the direction of Daniel Frohman.

REFLECTIONS

To play ten leading parts in one season and to play them successfully is an unusual record for an amateur, but this is the score made by William Jennings Lee, who will be graduated from Bell's Broadway Dramatic School, Denver, Col., this week. Mr. Lee declined several good offers during the first of the season, preferring to wait until he had completed his course in the school before entering the profession. He is said to be a handsome young gentleman, has a pleasing voice and excellent stage presence, and will doubtless be successful in his chosen vocation.

H. V. Esmond's new comedy, My Lady Virtue, was produced at the London Garrick on Oct. 27. It was pronounced distinctly clever but hardly equal to some earlier efforts of the same author.

Robert Lee Allen, a native of Milwaukee, has made a hit in leading roles with Charles B. Hanford and is getting praise from the papers along the route.

Mrs. Eliza Freeman, mother of the late Kate Castleton, has brought suit in courts of Oakland, Cal., to have the administrators of her daughter's estate removed. The administrators have taken no steps to settle up the estate, which is reckoned at about $30,000, and Mrs. Freeman desires an accounting.

Lillian Dix has been obliged to leave the Quincy Adams Sawyer company and return to New York to undergo an operation. She is now in the New York Hospital.

Isabel Fenton has resigned from The Two Sisters company and has joined Daniel Sully in The Parish Priest.

Anna Wilka, soubrette of A Desperate Chance company, was taken suddenly ill while playing in Cincinnati last week. Miss Priestly Morrison played the soubrette part on one hour's notice, and scored a success.

A. W. Cross is negotiating to star Billie Gold next season in a new sensational Western comedy-drama entitled A Colorado Waif.

The Chicago Musical College gave the first matinee of the season on Oct. 25. The programme included a performance of School, a musical recital and a lecture.

George L. Cox is playing Captain Clark with The Secret Dispatch.

The newest of the popular advertisement comedies is from the pen of Roy L. McCardell and J. Hayden-Clarendon, and is entitled Sunny Jim or Jim Dumps, a musical absurdity in three acts. The new play will go into rehearsal this week and will be produced by the authors jointly.

Harriett Moon hopes to be able to return to New York on Nov. 12. She has nearly recovered from the injuries she recently sustained.

Siegfried Wagner, son of Richard Wagner, and himself a musician of some note, will shortly visit America to conduct a series of concerts and to interest Americans in the Wagner performances at Bayreuth.

Flora Redledge, who returned recently after a successful engagement in London, is now playing the title-role in The Belle of New York.

The New York run of Everyman ended at Mendelsohn Hall on Saturday.

The Balcony Club, an organization of men and women who dine together and then see plays from upstairs, attended Henrietta Crosman's performance of The Sword of the King at Wallack's on Oct. 23. They decide by ballot whither they shall wend their way, and it is said, the selection of Miss Crosman's play was accomplished without a dissenting vote.

Vesta Stanton, who was engaged for character work with The Power of Truth, has been made leading woman.

Mamie Lincoln closed with The Convict's Daughter (Eastern) on Nov. 2.

The New York Clipper will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its first issue by a special memorial number, to be published in February. The veteran paper promises that this jubilee number will eclipse any of its previous efforts and will be a notable achievement in the printer's art.

The Twelfth Night Club will have charge of the drama day, Nov. 13, during the convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held in Brooklyn. The Committee of Arrangements includes Alice Fischer, Mrs. Edwin Arden, Sallie Williams Riegel, Josephine Humphreys, Blanche Bates, Elisabeth Tyree, Minnie Dupree, and Eleanor Robson. Grant Stewart's one-act skit, A Burning Question in Elysium, will be presented by the Twelfth Nighters at the Amphion Theatre, Brooklyn.

Sullivan, Harris and Woods have selected the title of the play by Hal Reid, in which Joe Welch is to star this season. It is to be called The Peddler, and the season will open at the Fourteenth Street Theatre during the week of Dec. 15.

On Oct. 24 Emma Italia, of McFadden's Flats company, gave a banquet to the women members of the company at the Centropolis Hotel, Kansas City.

Ellis M. Ellis and Sam McCutcheon will take a stock company into the Canadas, opening at St. John, N. B., on Nov. 17.

J. Wesley Stevenson, whose mother died in Louisville on Oct. 10, has rejoined W. C. Cunningham, general manager for Al. W. Martin, in Chicago.

It is stated that The Emerald Isle will return to the Herald Square Theatre for a six weeks' engagement later in the season.

A. H. Chamberlyn has nearly recovered from the illness that confined him in the German Hospital for many weeks, and is at his home at Brighton, a suburb of Boston.

A novel and timely advertising plan is being worked by E. J. Carpenter, manager of the Carpenter attractions. Mr. Carpenter has instructed his several managers with his companies on the road to advertise that coal will be given away to the ladies after each matinee performance. This should certainly appeal to everybody at this time.

Peggy from Paris is rapidly approaching a state beyond the stage of rehearsal and music rehash. Walter Burridge is at work on the story.

H. A. D'Arcy is writing a sketch for Billie Mayer and Mildred Meeks, called Nathal and Nichatta. Mr. D'Arcy has been engaged as author of Jules Murry's companies.

Kathryn Kidder will commence her tour in December. Miss Kidder is now visiting friends in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Milton Royle are to revive their old success, Friends, prior to their appearance in a new comedy in this city.

Max S. Witt has composed special musical numbers for Anna Boyd's production of A Friend of the Family. The words are by Arthur L. Robb and James W. Johnson.

Johnny and Emma Ray will, it is said, produce a new musical comedy about Jan. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. McLean (Odette Tyler) have leased a house in Washington for the Winter and will not act this season.

Maud Milton, the English actress, well-known here through her long association with Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, is to tour Australia early next year under the management of George Musgrove.

The road company to present A Chinese Honeymoon, has been completed and the principals are John E. Henshaw, Belle Harper, Charles H. Prince, Edwin A. Clark, W. H. Clark, and May Ten Broeck.

Dallas Tyler has joined David Warfield's company as that actor's leading woman.

Mark Twain and Lee Arthur's dramatization of Huckleberry Finn will be produced at Parson's Theatre, Hartford, Conn., on Nov. 10.

Madame Charlie has gone from Havana to Mexico to fill an engagement with the Serini Italian Opera company.

The Hadfield Stock company has secured the rights to The Princess of Patches from Al. Trahern for towns not played by the Morrison Comedy company.

Harry Corson Clarke, who lately severed his connection with Goodbus and Kolleog, under whose management he was starring in Hello, Bill, will begin an engagement as a special feature with the Harrington-Reynolds Stock company at the new Republic Theatre, in San Francisco, late in November.

Whitman and Davis are to be featured in the comedy parts in Man to Man.

At the close of Weedon Grossmith's engagement in The Night of the Party at the Princess Theatre next February, he will not tour this country, but will go to Australia after a brief season in San Francisco.

Arthur Maitland has been especially engaged by Mildred Holland to play the Prince in The Lily and the Prince.

Bonnie Maginn, who resigned from Weber and Fields' Stock company on Saturday night, has been engaged for Blue Beard.

Leslie Morosco and Lelia Shaw, who are to be featured in The Man from Mexico under the management of Walter E. Perkins and Frank Caldwell, opened their season last evening at Wilmington, Del. The company includes Edward Wallen, Clarence Baker, Louis Peters, J. L. Ostrand, Robert White, George S. Fisher, Joseph Holland, F. Conmeyer, W. M. Struggles, Marguerite Hammond, Fanny Fish, and Virginia Milton. The production is under the personal direction of Edward Warren.

Clay G. Sears and Noel Gordon have been engaged to appear in a London production, and will afterward tour the English provinces. They sail to-morrow (Wednesday) on the Majestic.

Mistress Willoughby's Kiss, a new play by Frank Stayton, was produced at the Avenue Theatre, London, on Oct. 18, and was received with a considerable show of favor. Another new play, Captain Kettle, written by Malcolm Watson and Murray Carson, and based upon the stories of C. J. Cutliffe Hyne, was presented at the London Adelphi on Oct. 23 and met with a similar reception.

R. C. Pugsley has taken the management of The Coontown 400, replacing James Rogers, who resigned.

Will Kilroy, of Kilroy and Britton, will put on the road next season An Aristocratic Tramp, a sensational comedy-drama in four acts. They are this season with Lincoln J. Carter's Heart of Chicago.

SAID TO THE MIRROR.

W. L. Grove, general manager for W. E. Nankeville: "Human Hearts was never booked at the Grand Opera House, Jackson, Ohio, as stated in The Mirror last week."

W. B. Watson: "My Brooklyn, N. Y., theatre, opposite the City Hall, which has been in course of construction since Aug. 22, will be completed on or about Jan. 1. I have not as yet decided as to the class of attractions I will book, but will do so in the near future."

Zella Frank: "I am not to be connected in any way with Arthur Etherington in the revival of The Rounders."

Gertrude Sayre: "It was I and not Miss Deronde that played the part of Mirandy in The Billionaire last week."

George E. Sterling, business-manager Beyond Pardon company: "I wish to state emphatically that Beyond Pardon has not closed, as has been stated in the press, but will go on the road again as soon as suitable alterations have been made in the play."

Harrison and Ritter: "In The Mirror we see a statement from Manager English that we are using copyrighted plays, which is untrue. Our repertoire consists of three of A. L. Fanshawe's plays, for which we pay a royalty, and we have the author with us as our stage director. Our other bills are book pieces. In writing Mr. English for time we mentioned the list of plays formerly used by the Long Brothers."

Nat J. Fields: "The statement in last week's Mirror, to the effect that my Juvenile Minstrel company disbanded at Elmira, N. Y., is not true. We closed temporarily to reorganize at Muncy, Pa., when all fares were paid back to Philadelphia and all salaries were paid in full."

John M. Evelch: "The recent statements that the George Parsons company closed at Louisville, Ky., are false. Two changes were made in the cast and P. S. Mattox will retire from the management of the company."

ENGAGEMENTS.

Fred Urban, with M. B. Curtis.

H. S. Northrup, with Henry Miller.

F. A. Bigelow, for the heavy in Man to Man.

Charles Marriott is not going with Old Jed Prouty as stated, but has signed with Liebler and co. for Audrey.

Carl Anthony, by Edward C. White, for the heavy in Gypsy Jack.

Margaret Ruffner, with Lewis Morrison.

Virginia Harvey and Gavin H. Dorothy, for The Way of the Wicked.

Legrand Howland, with Blanche Bates.

Sidney Cowell has been engaged by Manager William A. Brady for Grace George's company.

Pearl Ford, for J. J. Lodge's production of The Great Ruby.

George Caduix, for the boy role in Broadhurst and Currie's new production, The Man from Sweden. Fitzgerald Pepion, the English sculptor, has just completed a life-size bust of Master George.

IN OTHER CITIES.

KANSAS CITY.

The Eighth Annual Home Show, in Convention Hall and the American Royal Live Stock Show, at the Stock Yards, brought many visitors to the city Oct. 20-25. Convention Hall was filled with a large and fashionable audience on the opening night, 20.

The ever welcome Bostonians made their appearance at the Willis Wood Theatre 20-25, presenting Robin Hood and Maid Marian. Robin Hood was the bill for the first three nights and the popular opera was witnessed by large audiences. The opera was beautifully staged and costumed, the Sherwood Forest scene being especially worthy of praise. The old favorites appeared to advantage as Alan-a-Dale, winning several encores to her songs. William C. Weeden made a fine impression as Robin Hood; Allen C. Hinckley as Will Scarlet sang his songs well, but was hardly as good as his predecessors; Campbell Donald as Guy of Gisborne, and Anna Judson as Annabel, also deserve praise. Vernon Stiles, the Kansas City tenor, who was formerly with the Bostonians, sang the role of Robin Hood in two performances of each opera. He happened to be in town and the management secured him for the special engagement. Maid Marian was presented the latter half of the week and many considered the opera superior to Robin Hood. Henry C. Barnabee, W. H. MacDonald, George R. Frothingham and Josephine Bartlett all appeared to excellent advantage in their original roles. Vernon Stiles, the Kansas City boy, sang the role of Robin Hood excellently, winning loud applause. Grace Van Studdiford was still unable to appear and Antoosette Martin again sang her role. Olive Celeste Moore and Alice Judson were also well received. The opera was prettily staged and costumed.

Richard Golden in Peggy Quilter was the offering 27-29, playing to large audiences. Kansas Citians had the pleasure of seeing Jerome Hyden in the same comedy last season, and its reappearance with Richard Golden in the leading role was a very acceptable one. Mr. Golden is very original in his delineation of the comical character and kept the audience in roars of laughter. His topical song "Smiles" was repeated encores and several curtain calls, and finally a speech was required after the second act. Henry Leone as the Corsican schared honors with the star. His strong baritone was heard to excellent advantage in several musical numbers, winning loud applause. Adolph Link, the only remaining member of the original co., was very amusing as the Japanese dwarf, who had an "irresistible impulse." Melville Collins, William Conley, George Head, Carlotta Gilman, Daisy Hamlin and Edna Bronson carried other principal roles very successfully. The opera was well staged and many pretty costumes were worn. De Wolf Hopper will be seen in his new opera, Mr. Pickwick, 30-1. The Liberty Belles 2-8. E. H. Sothern 10-12. Adolph Phillips 13-15.

The new system at the Auditorium is proving a winner in every way; the old-time packed houses are the rule, with the S. R. O. sign in frequent use. Antony and Cleopatra was chosen as the bill for the second week of the MacDowell-Stone engagement, and was in many ways superior to La Tosca, the opening bill. Melbourne MacDowell's Marc Antony is a piece of acting long to be remembered, and Florence Stone as Cleopatra far exceeded expectations in her interpretation of the role, comparing most favorably with her distinguished predecessors. Aside from the two leading roles there was little to do above the commonplace, but the members of the Woodward Stock co. did that little well. The most important role, that of Kephren, was well played by Willtard Blackmore. Wilson Enos appeared as Demetrius, George Berkeley as the Messenger, Myron L. Leffingwell as Octavius, Leslie Bingham as Octavia, Gertrude Berkeley as Charmion, and Gauntier Pottery as Iras, all furnishing excellent support. The play was beautifully staged and costumed. Gismonda was the bill for the third and last week of the engagement, beginning 26. Florence Stone was very effective in the title-role, winning much praise from both public and press. Melbourne MacDowell's Almeric is too well known to need criticism. The stock co. gave good support, Willtard Blackmore again coming to the front in the role of Baccaria Franco Accialoli, giving an excellent impersonation. Wilson Enos made much of the part of Bishop Sephson, and Leslie Bingham as Cyphriello, and Carrie Clark Ward as Thisbe were well cast. Manager Woodward gave the play an elaborate staging and costuming. Elita Proctor Otis as Nancy Sykes in Oliver Twist, supported by the Woodward Stock co., is announced for 2-8.

McFadden's Row of Flats held the boards at the Grand 19-25, and although the play has been seen here a number of times, it was greeted by large audiences. The production has a new setting and costuming that enhanced its value greatly and with some new features proved very entertaining. The two "kids" are still played by Bobby Ralston and Jerry Sullivan, Arthur Whitelaw is the McFadden, James K. Wesley the Michael Muldoon, and Mary Donohue the Mrs. Murphy. Emma Italia plays Mary Ellen, and Henry Frey, Weary Willie, all to very good advantage. A pretty chorus was a pleasing feature. All On Account of Eliza made its initial appearance 26-Nov. 1, playing to good audiences. It is easily the best comedy seen here this season and was presented by a thoroughly capable co. Edward Lee gave an excellent character sketch as Hochstul, the president of the board of trustees, and was responsible for a good part of the comedy. Stella M. Kenny made much of the role of Elizabeth Carter, her acting being sincere and finished. Charles Hayden, Willis Baker, James Devine, William Henderson and Sarah Ward also deserve mention. The play was accurately staged, a great deal of care as to detail being shown. The Village Postmaster 2-8. Ward and Vokes 9-15.

The Night Before Christmas, another old favorite, was the bill at the Gillis 19-25. The play was well staged and presented a capable co. Elmer Grandin, James N. Drew, James B. Martin, Frank Bryan, Jessee J. Boyd, Georgia Munson, Marie Kenzie, and Allen Clifton handled the principal roles very cleverly. Large audiences were the rule throughout the week. Al. W. Martin's elaborate production of Uncle Tom's Cabin held the board 26-1 and they "stood 'em up" at nearly every performance. The production from a scenic standpoint was easily the best ever seen here and the co. proved very capable. Frank Lee was the Uncle Tom; Hugh Ettinger, Simon Legree; George W. Parks, Lawyer Marks; Florence Ockerman, Topsy, and Baby Henrietta, Little Eva, all appearing to excellent advantage. Numerous specialties were well received. Across the Pacific 2-8.

The Grace Hayward co. returned to the Century 19-25, playing The Wages of Crime for the first part of the week and The Circus Queen the latter part. Thaddeus Gray, Hugh MacKaye, John D'Ormonde, Lee Morris, Edythe Harcourt and Virginia Campbell all deserve mention for well played parts. Specialties between the acts were well received. Fair audiences were in attendance. Nothing is announced for this house until Dec. 7, when Innes and his Band will appear for two concerts.

Preparations for the Flower Show, that will be held in Convention Hall 3-8, are being rushed this week, and the directors promise the most beautiful spectacle of a similar nature ever attempted.

Sousa's Band is announced for two concerts at the Willis Wood Theatre Sunday, 9. Heretofore Sousa has always played in Convention Hall, but the Flower Show this year forces him to go elsewhere.

It is announced that Kansas City is to see Ben-Hur for two weeks beginning Jan. 12.

The Oratorio Society has secured Theodore Thomas and his orchestra for their next May Festival, preparations for which are now under way. The society will sing The Messiah in Convention Hall Dec. 28.

D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Otis Skinner's production of Lazarre, dramatized from Mary Hartwell Catherwood's novel by Otis Skinner and Aubrey Boucicault, drew large audiences to English's Oct. 20-25. In this community where Mrs. Catherwood's book was published, the plot of Lazarre is well known. Hardly any actor could make more of his part than Mr. Skinner did. It is the play that is at fault—it is weak, theatric, unconvincing. Miss Durbin, as Eagle De Ferrier, has a part that suits her, temperamentally and physically, and all through the drama she won the sympathy and respect of her audience. Nanette Comstock, in the ingenue part of Annabel, was very dainty and piquant, and added much to the pleasure of the evening. In her comedy scenes she was at her best, and her scene with the Count de Chaumont in the second act was one of the delightful bits of the play. The Dr. Chantry of Walter Allen was a dignified and consistent bit of acting, and the Shenandoah of Damon Lyon deserves credit as being one of the only dignified and well acted American Indians ever seen on the American stage. There were several other parts well taken, especially the Napoleon of Charles B. Welles, and the King Louis of Mr. Ringold. The Princess Marie of Alice Wilson was also well done. The play is well dressed and well managed.

Despite its melodramatic title, Lincoln J. Carter's new play, The Madman, at the Park 23-25 is a comedy and something of a departure from his usual style. It has some exciting movements in it, but the fun far outweighs the sensational side. T. G. Lingham, whom we remembered so well as an Indianapolis boy, was excellent. George Perlolet, as the Drummer, was good. His manly appearance and comedy did much to strengthen the performance. Charles Plunkett, Lloyd Ingraw, Thomas Baker, William Otis, Adolphe Plunkett, Florence Willis, and Cecile La Rocque have the principal parts. Miss Willis sings several songs and does a coke walk with Mr. Baker. The Mirrolli Square Comedy Four contribution seems, and there are other specialties. The small seated house.

Although A Runaway Girl was here last season at Fagan's, interest in it was renewed by an audience that packed the Park Theatre 27-29 to the doors. It is doubtful if the Park ever had a musical comedy of such genuine merit as this one. The co. is strong in talent, as well as in number, the members star well and unite their efforts in making the production move to a pleasant end. With its scenes about Venice, there is opportunity for effective stage pictures, with which the soft music and gay costumes blend well. George W. Leslie plays the part of Flipper, the jockey, and he was irresistibly funny. Louise Willis appeared as Winifred Grey, and was rounds of applause. Hallie Kirby impersonated the Gypsy dancing girl. She is gifted in voice as well as in the use of it. Herbert Bears, in the character of the school teacher, was droll in action and speech, and he shared generously in the applause. Rose La Harte, Paulette Sheldon, Frank Symonds, Arthur Seaton, Edwin Rizer, and Walter Clifford are some of the players who were with the co. two years ago.

That Indianapolis theatregoers still hunger for real comedy was proved by the great audience 27 that devoured The Rivals as a choice morsel at English's last night. It was good to see Mr. Jefferson, and it was equally good to see his capable co. No sooner did the curtain rise on the first act than the audience began to dust off its wits, which had so long gone unused, realizing that something good was before it. Mr. Jefferson is still an actor, and the picture of what he is now and what he has been is pleasant to contemplate. To be sure he is not as vigorous as he once was, but he is the same Bob Acres that we have seen these many years. The Rivals would be interesting, however, with an "Acres" other than Mr. Jefferson, because of the excellent support he has about him. John Jack, as Sir Anthony, forgets that he is an actor, but he cannot make the audience forget it. Joseph Jefferson, Jr., as Sir Lucious O'Trigger, who is on the stage with his father much of the time, is pleasing. Walter Ware, as Faulkland, was excellent and did some very good work in the first act. His fit of jealousy was realistic. Lafollett Paget made a fine Mrs. Malaprop, Francis Pemberton is by far the best Lydia Languish seen for many a day.

The matinee musical 22 at the Propylaeum had an interesting miscellaneous programme, the principal feature of which was the introduction to a cantata by Mohr.

The recital given by Mrs. Black at the Propylaeum 23 was a great success.

The Musikverein 22 began its new season of concerts, with a chorus that filled the stage of the auditorium of the German House and an orchestra that appeared to number sixty.

Frank Fisher, who has been near death's door for some time with that strange affliction, bleeding of the gums, is still very low at the St. Vincent Hospital. There seems but very little hope of his recovery.

MILWAUKEE.

Mrs. Fiske opened her season in Mary of Magdala at the Pabst Theatre Oct. 23 before a distinguished audience, and one that filled the handsome playhouse to its utmost capacity. Paul Heyse's drama is in five acts and four scenes—all in Jerusalem. The play produced a profound impression, though it is difficult to judge it from the ordinary theatrical standpoint. The subject is reverently dealt with, and a strong religious atmosphere pervades throughout. The onlooker is chiefly impressed by the feeling that one is in the presence of Christ; the actions of the various characters are controlled by His invisible influence, and with breathless expectancy the auditor almost wishes to see the figure of the Saviour appear. The dramatist, however, has treated the theme with the utmost delicacy and prudence, and, while the drama must teach a strong moral lesson, there is nothing to offend the religious sensibilities of anybody, and the mind is stimulated and inspired by the classic beauty of the language, the exalted tone of the play, the vivid and artistic reproduction of the scenes and characters of that thrilling period, and the surpassing grandeur of the stage settings. Nothing more perfect in every detail could be imagined. As was to be expected, Mrs. Fiske's portrayal of Mary was intellectual in conception, and wonderfully finished in execution. Her magnetic presence dominated every scene, and her superb work was enthusiastically applauded by an appreciative and grateful audience. Tyrone Power as Judas scored a triumph; his grasp of the inward characteristics of the man being masterful. Henry Woodruff offered a telling interpretation of Aulus Flavius. His acting, elocution and zeal for his work were admirable. Rose Rytinge gave a delightful rendition of Rachael, and excellent work was done by M. J. Jordan as Caiaphas, Scott Craven as Haran, Max Figman as Gotham, James Young as Joab, Frank McCormack as Gamaliel, W. B. Mack as Simon, and Ida Hamilton as Miriam.

Sweet Clover was seen for the first time at the Bijou 26 by an immense audience, and the pretty play was received with unmistakable signs of favor. An excellent co. interpreted the play cleverly. Otis B. Thayer being featured in the principal role of Jerome Holcombe. Mr. Thayer's impersonation was faithful and sincere, and he was heartily applauded. Blanche Hall gave a sympathetic and effective portrayal of Lois Holcombe, an exceptionally clever characterization of Aunt Abigail was offered by Eleanor Sheldon, Fred G. Hearn scored an emphatic hit as old Jud Mason, Gertrude Schaffer was charmingly as Sunny Andrews, and good work was done by Edmund Ford and Lew H. Newcomb. The stage settings were very tasteful. Up York State 2-8.

A Bachelor's Honeymoon kept a large audience merry at the Academy 27, and the Thanhouser co. scored another success. R. C. Chamberlin in the role of Bachelor was afforded an opportunity to display his best talents as a comedian, and he won favor in the part. Laurette Allen with the much dreaded Minerva, and the twin sisters were cleverly represented by Blanche Crozier and Coral Armin. Grace May Lamkin added another to her series of successes as Juno Jovee, her interpretation leaving little to be desired. Lulu Hastings gave a capital portrayal of Marianne, the maid with the "clue;" Albert Brown was excruciatingly funny as Howston, Edgar Baume was humorous as Dr. Schwartz, and Lee Baker deserves the highest praise for a thoughtful and artistic sketch in the role of Anthony Gumbug. Gilbert Faust as Joe added to the general success. The stage settings were suitable. Humpty Dumpty, an extravaganza by George Foster Platt, will receive its first performance 3.

The Wizard of Oz appeared at the Davidson 26 to S. R. O. The production was beautifully mounted, and created the utmost enthusiasm by reason of the startling display of stage effects and spectacular features. The book and music do not rise above the ordinary, and all the fun-making is odd and unconventional, which may possibly comprise what charm it possesses. The principals in the co. worked very hard, and succeeded in creating much laughter and applause. The burden of the performance fell upon Anna Laughlin, Edwin J. Stone, Helen Byron, Joseph Schrode, Carleton King, Grace Kimball, Fred A. Stone, Arthur Hill, and David C. Montgomery. Bobby Gaylor was the Wizard. Elsie De Wolfe in The Way of the World 3-5. The Storks 6-8 (return engagement).

Zig Zag Alley drew a full house at the Alhambra 23, and Zeb and Zarrow and their associates gave a clever and amusing performance. Fun of the fast and furious kind kept the audience in excellent humor, and a variety of good specialties were introduced with satisfactory results. The mechanical effects were a most interesting feature of the production, and some very pretty songs were sung by Andrew O'Neill and Ella Shields. Other contributors to the bill were Lillie Southerland and Louis Martinetti, Lillie Sieger, Golf Phillips, the Damin Brothers, William C. Hoefler, and Zeb and Zarrow. The Great Ruby 2-8.

Jugend was presented at the Pabst 26 before a good audience by the Wachsner co., and the performance elicited much praise. Der Schlagbaum will be given 29 and Die Grille 2.

Burton Holmes will commence his series of lectures at the Pabst 4, the first subject being Portugal.

CLAUDE L. N. NORRIE.

BUFFALO.

The Castle Square Opera co. is playing to deservedly fine audiences at the Teck. Week of Oct. 27-1 was devoted to Lohengrin and The Bohemian Girl, and an artistic rendering of both operas was given. The mounting and costuming of Lohengrin was equal to, if not better than, any other production of the opera presented here. The title-role of Lohengrin was sung by Joseph Sheehan in fine voice, although at times the score seemed a little too heavy for him. Gertrude Rennyson was thoroughly artistic as Elsa, singing and acting the role satisfactorily. Ethel Houston Du Pre as Ortrud and Winifred Goff as Tairamund displayed fine voices and considerable dramatic ability. Francis Boyle and Parker Coombs alternated as the king, as did Francis Carrier and Parker Coombs as Herald. Leah Lambert made a very pretty Gotfried. In The Bohemian Girl Adelaide Norwood again added to her popularity here, singing the role of Arline in a most pleasing manner. Marion Ivell was an ideal Gypsy Queen, her acting being far above the usual opera singer, and her solo, "Bliss Forever Past," was repeatedly encored. Francis Boyle made considerable merriment as Devilshoof, and Lloyd D'Aubigne displayed a pleasing voice as Thaddeus. William Paull as Count Arnheim, Charles Fulton as Florestine, Charles Scribner as Captain, and Nora McGahan as Buda completed the cast. Lilly of Killarney and Tannhauser 3-8.

The well-known melodrama, Lost in the Desert, was the attraction at the Lyceum 27-1, and proved a drawing card. The co. contains several well-known people, and some startling scenic effects are displayed. Amanda Wellington made a very pleasing Helen Bradford, the heroine of the drama, and was ably assisted by Jefferson Osborne, as Duncan Howells. A show piece of character work was that of Gertrude Fort, as Amanda, Richard. Miss Fort is a comedienne of considerable ability. A troupe of Arabs and their horses contributed a large share of the success of the performance. Happy Hooligan 3-5.

Sun Hur opened a two weeks' engagement at the Star 27 to a large audience, and proved to be one of the finest spectacles ever seen here. The stage settings and costuming are especially beautiful, the chariot race and ballets being enthusiastically received. William Parsons, well-known here, played the title-role, and both in appearance and acting filled the part admirably. Dobson Mitchell, as Simonides, does a fine piece of work. Mabel Mortimer, as Iris, was capable and finished. Ellen Mortimer as Esther, Beverly Sitgreaves as Amrah, and Basil Gill as Messala also did well.

The Counterfeiters held forth at the Academy 21-1, and filled the box-office with the "real article." The play is of the sort the Academy audiences revel in, containing lots of thrills and startling climaxes at every layoth. Some fine scenery is shown, and the cast is fully competent, and includes John Welsh, J. H. Gross, Fred Eckhart, Charles Osborne, Maude Carey, Frances Paul, Abbie Marshall, and a number of others. Nobody's Claim 2-8.

Marshall Darrach, of New York, read Hamlet at the Twentieth Century Club 21 before an interested audience.

The Castle Square Opera co. will give a sacred concert 2, when Rossini's Stabat Mater will be sung.

Acting Manager Oviatt, of the Lyceum, announces the opening of his new production, Judged Guilty, at Auburn, N. Y., 15. A fine co. has been engaged, and everything is being done to make the play a success. It will be seen at the Lyceum later in the season.

The Mascagni Grand Opera co. gave three performances here 28, 29 to fair audiences. The operas presented were Cavalleria Rusticana, Iris, and Lucretia, and were finely sung and staged. The chorus and orchestra being especially good.

Emilio Gorgona, baritone, has been engaged for next "Pop" concert.

JOSEPH O'CONNOR.

DETROIT.

A dramatic treat is the appearance here of E. S. Willard, announced to be his last for some years, who is seen at the Detroit Opera House Oct. 19-25 in a repertoire of his chief plays, prominent among them being The Cardinal, presented for the first time in this city, which is put on for three evenings and Wednesday matinee, with Mr. Willard in the same part of The Cardinal, Giovanni de Medici. His embodiment of the principal figure in Louis N. Parker's impressive play is finely given, and is truly the highest achievement this actor has aimed at among his long line of successes. Rose Beaudet, with proper dignity, sustained the role of Clarice de Medici. Maude Fealy is happily placed as Filiberta, making a pretty stage picture, but hardly equal as far as elocutionary powers are concerned, but she pleased the eye if not the ear. Giuliano, the young brother of the Cardinal, could hardly have been intrusted to better hands than those of A. S. Homewood, who presented it in a manly way. No less pleasing portrayal was that of J. J. Bartlett as Guido Bagliani. The outlaw, Strozzi, was a popular one in the hands of Basset Roe, who imbues it with the proper spirit and fidelity. J. G. Taylor was likewise to be admired as the old bell ringer. Mr. Willard will play Tom Pinch, Wednesday; David Garrick, Friday; Saturday matinee, The Professor's Love Story; Saturday evening, The Middleman.

Richard Mansfield in Julius Caesar will be the attraction at this theatre 27-29, followed by "Way Down East for balance of the week.

Detroit promises to be very gay in a musical way during the coming Winter. Among the many good things to be heard is Mascagni, who will bring his Italian Orchestra and Opera co. here for two concerts on 11, the afternoon performance to be given at the Lyceum Theatre, when Iris will be presented, and The Light Guard Armory used for the evening, when Cavalleria Rusticana will be the attraction.

Harmonie Hall celebrated its opening for the season with a concert Sunday evening 26, that attracted a large gathering of people. Louise B. Voigt was as usual one of the favored soloists, rendering Weber's "Oberon," and singing the soprano role in Der Landsknecht, by Stritzke in concert with Harry Mengel, tenor; August Heidenreich, basso, and George Schwenk, baritone, with Anton F. Dierkes and Wilhelm Yorn in the double tenor parts. The men's chorus showed to more advantage than the women's, and bore evidence of careful training by their director, Mr. Brueckner. The women gave in chorus Die Malkoenigin, by Krug, and Beim Sonnenuntergang, by Gade, the orchestra furnishing excellent accompaniment.

The Lyceum Theatre patrons are giving plenty of encouragement to Primrose and Dockstader in their annual visit here, where they are presenting their bright, laughable and up-to-date doings in the minstrelsy line 28-1. Lew Dockstader is ever a favorite here with his bundle of absurdities and pretty songs, and Mr. Primrose made a hit with his dainty conceit, "Sunny, Sunny South," his pickaninnies, Johnnie and Willie Ray, assisting in dancing and singing. The first part of the programme is entirely new and shows many original ideas. The end men exploit up-to-date jokes, sing and dance acceptably. The specialties introduced are the Howard Brothers in a banjo act, Neil O'Brien as the chief feature in The Doctor's Trouble, a comical sketch, and the Brothers Young in a hoop rolling act that is decidedly clever. Mr. Dockstader elicited laughs in abundance with a ludicrous automobile turn that is an artistic bit. Mr. O'Reilly 3-8.

Gypsy Jack is interesting large audiences at the Whitney Theatre 19-25. Willie Granger plays the part of Jack Hearbe capably. Eugene Bantley figures as the villain, Gerald Skinner. Will U. Prendergast as Francis Harvey, Dorothy La Mar as Dorothy Dexter, Lucie A. Rogers as May Harvey, May Nibbo-Drew as Hagar, Florence Hartley as Nan, Joseph Carey as the Recruit, and Joseph Wickes as the Jolly Tar, all assist in the production. Over Niagara Falls 26-1.

A. DUMONT.

PITTSBURG.

The Great Ruby proved a very strong attraction at the Grand Oct. 20-1, and the stock co. gave a most creditable performance to crowded houses during the two weeks. The scenery and properties were among the most elaborately mounted productions ever seen at this popular playhouse, and State Director Huffman deserves a great deal of praise for his successful contribution in this line. Among the most prominent effects were the large inflated balloon, a tally-ho coach drawn by four horses, and an electric automobile. Eva Taylor played the role of the whimsical and frivolous Lady Garnett very cleverly, and her sleep-walking scene was finely executed. Minna Phillips has done nothing better thus far this season than her fascinating portrayal of Countess Charkoff. Mace Greenleaf was a handsome and virile James Brett, the detective. William Beach was given a warm reception upon his return to the co. and was obliged to make a short speech at each performance in acknowledgment. His part of Morrius Longman was well drawn. Willis Martin's characterization of Lord George Hartopp was skillfully played. Marion Ballou made a lovable Louise Jupp. William Ingersoll as Prince Kassim Wadia, Charles Abbe as Lord Montyghall, Wilton Taylor as Sir John Garnett, Thomas Meighan as Captain Clive Dalrymple, James Cooper as Andrews, and Dennie Harris as Hans, all deserve mention. The balance of the large cast was in capable hands, and the supernumeraries were well drilled. The Little Minister 3-8.

Mam'selle 'Awkins played its third engagement within a year at the Empire 27-1 to good attendance, but it was not as good as when last seen here, and consequently did not meet with approval. The scenery and costumes were adequate, and the chorus smaller and inferior to that of last season. Gus Bruno, with a grotesque make-up, together with his humorous work as the Macgregor, was much enjoyed, and was the one bright spot and redeeming feature of the play. J. J. Clinton made a cadaverous looking Fitzroy Cavendish, and his work was acceptable. Amy Lee's strenuous efforts as Honorah Hawkins were in vain. Carolyn M. Heustis, as Dolly Hawkins, failed to please. The balance of the cast was fair. Williams and Walker in In Dahomey 3-8.

The Man Who Dared was again seen and given a cordial welcome at the Bijou 27-1 and well merited the large business it did. The co. was an unusually strong one for plays of this type, and the scenery was both pretty and bright. The scene showing the cage containing two large lions, into whose cage the hero enters to secure the glove of the Countess, was a thrilling climax, and received several curtain calls. Howard Hall, in the dual role of the twin brothers, Louis and Lorraine Martineau, gave a highly finished and excellent performance. Nina Morris played the difficult part of Rita, Countess de Martineau, depicting a wicked and adventuresome woman in a clever manner. Henry C. Lewis, as Grissart, gave a very natural bit of acting. George D. Mackay played the false friend, Captain Paul Gerardlioux, capably. Will H. Vedder did well as Prince Henry de Brissac, and especially so in his disguise of a Hebrew in one act. Marion Leonard was a convincingly sweet and modest Marie de Montford, and Clara Joel acted the part of Grace Creatow cleverly. The remainder of the cast was thoroughly competent. Hanlon's Superba 3-8.

Manager R. M. Gulick, of the Bijou Theatre, returned home last Tuesday, 28, from a pleasant week's sojourn in New York city, where he went to see a performance of Tracy, the Outlaw, The Ninety and Nine, and other plays.

Richard Mansfield in Julius Caesar 27-1 at the Alvin followed by Joseph Jefferson in his usual repertory of plays 3-8.

ALBERT L. HEWES.

SEATTLE.

After an anticipation that extended over more than one whole season, Florodora was at last seen in this city by large and fashionable audiences at the Grand Opera House Oct. 19-22. That S. R. O. did not prevail may be, in part, accounted for by the 25 schedule maintained for the best seats. King Dodo was seen some two weeks ago at $1.50, and many, it would seem, could not understand the reason for the increase. Then, too, some of the principals were not received with entire favor, as voiced by the press and many of the public. Those who escaped adverse comment, however, and who, indeed, scored immensely, were Alf C. Wheelan as Tweedlepunch, Eleanor Falk as Lady Holyrood, and Corinne as Dolores. The former, after his song with Corinne, "We're Both on the Stage," was forced nightly to beg the indulgence of the audience in order that the performance might proceed. The double sextette was received with enthusiastic favor, and recalls without number were insisted upon at each performance. The music as rendered by the special orchestra and the work of the chorus were very fine, and no doubt Florodora would be popular here for many return engagements, should such be played. No more finished performance has been seen here for a very long time, if indeed time may be considered as an element at all, than was The Bonnie Brier Bush, as played by J. H. Stoddart and his excellent co. 23-25. Large audiences that expressed the keenest appreciation of every point of the performance, tendered the venerable star a most hearty reception. Though he had not been seen here before for eleven seasons, the applause at his first entrance was so great that the performance could not proceed for several minutes, and at the end of the play the audience remained seated until the curtain was raised a second time. The naturalness of the character, Lachlan Campbell, as it was played, need not be measured by any qualifying epithet; those who did not attend will not know what they missed until the opportunity be afforded of seeing J. H. Stoddart in this role again. Reuben Fax, as "Posty," gave a performance in all ways excellent. Every part in the cast was capably sustained, and to mention one with favor would be to name them all. West's Minstrel Jubilee 26-29. Haverly's Minstrels 2-5. A Poor Relation 6-8.

A Wise Member opened to an S. R. O. house at the Seattle 19, and business continued good throughout the week. The company proved amusing to this layer, and the audiences seemed well satisfied. Arthur Varnor, Harry Williams, Edward Dulaney, B. Van Alstyne, Maud Marvin, and Laura Evans appeared in principal parts, and many vocal selections of a popular nature were introduced during the performance. The Stowaway 26-1. Florence Roberts for an engagement of two weeks, beginning 2.

On the Stroke of Twelve opened to the usual packed house at the Third Avenue 19, and large audiences attended during the week. The escape from the penitentiary in the second act proved a sensational scene. Lamar Mon as Jack Rutledge and Harry Mayo as George Bainbridge appeared to advantage. Frederick Monley doubled effectively as Henry Rutledge and Prisoner No. 1,160. The comedy was furnished by Harry First as Moses Levi, John H. Mack as Jasper, and Frank Carroll as Pat. Others of the co. were fair in their parts. Hunting for Hawkins 26-1. Yon Yonson 2-8.

RODNEY D. WHITE.

COLUMBUS.

York State Folks was presented to light business at the Southern Oct. 24, 25, and must be placed in the category of good things overlooked by our theatregoers. This rural drama is a delightful combination of quaint humor, delicate pathos, and differs radically from the conventional play of its type, in that there is no wronged woman or villain who essays top boots and a riding whip. The development of the story is quiet and natural, the characters are well drawn, and at the fall of the final curtain one is impressed with the fact that the world is not such a bad place after all. Ray L. Royce, as the old organ builder, interpreted the role in a manner that stamped him as an actor of uncommon ability and intelligence. A particularly meritorious and effective piece of work was the Simon Peter of James Lachaye. Osborne Searl impersonated the city chap creditably. Mrs. Sidman portrayed the part of Emeline Hubbard with a delicacy, refinement and finish that bespoke the true artist, and the rest of the cast met requirements.

On the Quiet, with Thomas W. Ross in the leading role, was the bill 27. Unfortunately Mr. Ross was an unknown quantity in this city, and business suffered greatly because of that fact. The star differs in style and method from his predecessor, but the dissimilarity by no means operates against him. Given a vehicle wherein he would have an opportunity to create a role, rather than follow in the footsteps of another person, and he would no doubt make an excellent showing, and score a success of definite order. His delivery was effective, his facial expression telling, and he aroused the mirth of his audience by purely legitimate methods. The co. was satisfactory. Joseph Jefferson appeared in Rip Van Winkle to capacity business 28.

Busy Izzy, with George Sidney in the leading comedy part, delighted the patrons of the Grand 23-25. Mr. Sidney kept the audience in a perpetual state of laughter, and his work was of such an amusing character that no one had time to figure out where the title of the comedy came in. His delineation of the Hebrew was a clever bit of character work, and he scored a decided personal success. The girls of the chorus were pretty and sang well, and would be a distinct gain to several of the high-class musical comedies that are foisted upon the denizens of the proylsions from time to time. The centrality voice of Helen Andrews was one of the features of the performances, and she made a hit of no small proportions. Fred Wilkoff and Edward Clark contributed some good comedy work, and deserve liberal praise for the general excellence of the offering.

Eugenie Blair did heavy business in Zaza 27-29. Her enactment of the leading role cannot be said to compare favorable with the original, the most patent defects in the impersonation being a lack of reserve power and a tendency to rant. The co. was competent and the play was well staged.

The Man Who Dared 26-28 and A Desperate Chance 27-29 did well at the High Street.

W. W. PROSSER.

MONTREAL.

Hearts Aflame opened at the Academy Oct. 27 to good business. Barring a few slight inconsistencies the play tells an interesting story and tells it well, and the production is beautifully staged and mounted. Dorothy Dorr, in the leading role of Mrs. Harmony, did some excellent work. Joseph Kilgour was an effective Chateris. Arnold Daly did a capital piece of work as Harmony. Bijou Fernandez deserves credit for her impersonation of Alison Deyo, and Margaret Drew scored a hit as the dancer, La Capina.

Trilby was the bill presented by the Proctor Stock 27-1, and the co. gave an exceptionally good performance. Sevengalli was a role entirely different to anything that Robert Drouet has heretofore appeared in, and he played the part with great ability, making a very strong impression. Jessie Bonstelle made an excellent Trilby, her very natural methods suiting the part. The Three Musketeers of the Brush, Taffy, The Laird and Little Billie were greatly played by John B. Walker, Benjamin Hornlow, and Oscar Graham respectively. William Carr did a capital piece of comedy work as Sam-Sam, and Eva Vincent's Madame Vinedal was a clever piece of characterization. Albert Davis was a capable Gecko. Press Eldridge, who is a big favorite here, did his clever monologue between the acts. The Littlest Girl and The Grey Mare 28-29.

The ever popular The Sign of the Cross is doing an enormous business at the Francais. The co. presenting it is a very capable one. George Flood as Marcus Superbus, Lilly Lorrell as Mercia, John W. Thompson as Nero, and Marguerite Calla as Berenice, are deserving of special mention. Miss Hosbell, as the boy, Myrtalinus, also does very good work. Gaston and Alphonse 2-8.

At the Royal The Sign of Life, with its many exciting situations, is pleasing large audiences. Frankie Francis makes a charming heroine, and Wallace Hopper is a good hero. The comedy work is well done by Maude Hartley and P. J. Craig. The Three Donnettas in their acrobatic work are a feature of the performance. The Jolly Grass Widows 2-8.

The old favorite, The Two Orphans, is the bill at the National Francais. Henriette Mont does some fine work as Henriette, Reynold Ventnell makes a charming Louise, H. Remy as Roger, M. Palmire as Pierre, and E. Hamel as Jacques are all deserving of mention.

Countess Sarah, by George Ohnet, is the bill at the Nouveau. Madame D'Arbelle scores in the title-role.

Lewis & Jessen Fennen is the bill at the Palais Royal.

Elsie Dee Fay continues another week at Windsor Hall.

W. A. TREMAYNE.

ST. PAUL.

The musical production, Mr. Pickwick, was presented by Do Wolf Hopper and an excellent co. at the Metropolitan Opera House Oct. 30-31. At the conclusion of a representative performance tendered Mr. Hopper and several old favorites in the co. and Mr. Hopper's admirable, Mr. Pickwick was very funny. His make-up was good and he sang with much spirit. Louise Gunning was a charming Arabella. Marguerite Clark was dainty and sweet as Polly. Laura Joyce Bell is an enjoyable sweetheart as Mr. Perkins. Digby Bell was happily cast as Sam Weller and was clothed in love. Harry Norman rendered the role of Tony Weller admirably both in voice and action. Grant Stewart was excellent as Alfred Jingle. The chorus, though small, was effective. The production was handsomely staged.

The Sweepmaster was presented by a capable co. under the Bowdoin Theatre management at the Metropolitan 26 and was enjoyed by a good audience. The co. was not as strong as those that have previously been seen here. Ruth White as Lieutenant Brittany and Willis Van Antwerp was most enjoyable. Fred Lenox as the Sweepmaster, F. E. Hamerlin as Jacoby and other principals rendered their roles acceptably. The chorus of male voices was especially good.

Stuart Robson and his capable co. appeared at the Metropolitan 27-29 in The Comedy of Errors. At the opening performance a large and appreciative audience thoroughly enjoyed the production. Mr. Robson has for years been a favorite with St. Paul audiences and he received a warm welcome. Mr. Robson as Dromio of Syracuse merits every requirement of the part. Clifford Leigh as Dromio of Ephesus was distinctly good and shared the honors with Mr. Robson. Very creditable work was offered by Edwin Holt as Antipholus of Syracuse, and Adolph Jachson as Antipholus of Ephesus. Excellent work was contributed by Eleanor Barry as Adriana, and Frances Graham Hoyt as Luciana. Laura Thompson was good as Pinch. Charles Lane as Solinus, Cecil Kingstone as Aegeon were commendable. By special request Mr. Robson will present The Rivals 30.

Elsie de Wolfe in The Way of the World 30-1. Rose Leahdl in The Voyager Boyer 2-8.

Keller, the magician, was the offering at the Grand Opera House 26-1 and at the opening performance the house was crowded to capacity. Keller gave a most enjoyable entertainment. His best work was seen in the "Levitating of Princess Karnac." "Fly To," or the Princess Karnac is a weird trick, startling in effect. Eugenie Blair as Zaza 2-8.

GEORGE H. COLGRAVE.

TORONTO.

There was a feast in the line of stage productions at the Princess Oct. 27-1 when Julian Edwards' and Stanislaus Stanger's production When Johnny Comes Marching Home was presented by the Princess Opera co. The scenery, mountings and people in the piece have all been put on in abundance, and some very beautiful effects are secured. The plantation scene on the Mississippi River, shown in the moonlight and again as the sun rises, was beautiful. The interest in When Johnny Comes Marching Home is dramatically and musically divided among the principal roles, and in both respects is superior to either Sun Toy or Floradora. Lucille Saunders, Zetta Kennedy, Julia Gifford, Maude Lambert, Homer Lind, Albert McGuckin, William G. Stewart, and George Backus are among the principals. Kelcey and Shannon in Sherlock Holmes 2-8.

At the Grand Opera House 27-1 Eugene Walter's new play, Sergeant James, by a capable co., was the bill, and though heralded as a companion play to Arizona, it is not up to that standard. Henry Kolker in the title-role was a careful worker, and won merited applause. Though overdrawn in his efforts to be comic, Harry Gilbert made a fair young miner comic. Olive White, the sergeant's former sweetheart, was capable in her part, as were also Carrie Lamont and Jane Field. Business was fairly good. The Mennettis of Magic 3-8.

The story of A Fight for Millions was often told at the Toronto Opera House 27-1, and with the ideal type of lead villain, who will be a bigamist, a murderer and all the adjective titles, the gallery attendant had his usual chance to show disapproval of an immoral life and appreciation of the acting at the same time. In the cast were J. K. Hutchinson, J. H. Howland, Howard Truesdale, Wilbur C. Reid, Nicholas S. Conway, George Bell, Robert Jackson, E. L. Jamesson, George W. Rodgers, W. C. De Verna, Laura Wall, Rolinda Bainbridge, Estella X. Wills, and Gracie Faust. The Span of Life 2-8.

Through the instrumentality of the manager of Massey Music Hall, Stewart Houston, Madame Marcella Sembrich gave a song recital 28 that was largely and fashionably attended. Sembrich has been heard here before in opera in The Barber of Seville and Lohengrin, but never before in a programme that gave her the same opportunity to show her power of song interpretation as on this occasion. Her programme, in three parts, consisted of songs in English, French, German and Russian.

S. Kronberg was here 28 making final arrangements for the appearance of Mascagni and his musicians, who will appear in Massey Hall 30.

STANLEY McKEOWN BROWN.

PORTLAND, ORE.

In the Bonnie Brier Bush that occupied the boards of the Marquam Grand Oct. 20-22, the local playgoers enjoyed as strong an attraction as one could wish to see this season. It proved to be a worthy play most worthily presented and should have packed the house at every performance. Instead of simply doing a good paying business, in J. H. Stoddard, as Lachlan Campbell, we renewed acquaintance both with a sterling actor and a powerful though fictional character. So natural and heart interesting was the portrayal of the part that one can never, after witnessing the play, separate the identity of the actor from the character. The production is cast in a manner commensurate with the play's worth and the star's ability. Reuben Fox scored an individual hit as "Posie," and gave us a delightful bit of comedy in his character acting. Russell Bassett was lifelike as Dr. MacLure, and Al. Phillips played the little minister in fine manner. Katherine Mulkins, as Flora Campbell, acquitted herself with distinction, and Bessie Baldwin, as Annie, was a valuable assistant to Mr. Fox, and Augustine Duncan, as Tammas, in disposing the humor of the piece. West's Minstrels appeared at the same house 24, 25. The show was stale, flat, and unprofitable and received but indifferent patronage. The songs were of last year's vintage, the specialties very old and the jokes were older, and only in Billy Van did one detect the old-time wit and humor of the halcyon days of minstrelsy. Riley's Royal Italian Band 27, 28. Floradora 29-31.

The Neill Stock co. revived another old favorite in Friends, that was the attraction at Baker's Theatre 19-25. The play was adequately cast and excellently presented and the attendance was of the S. R. O. order. Fred Mosey, as Hans Otto, did some fine acting and deserved the praise he received. The "Kayo" of Howard Russell was noteworthy and was a fitting foil to the half serious, half humorous portrayal of John Padin, Jr., of Charles Wyngate. Catherine Countess was at her best in the emotional role of Marguerite Otto. The scoundrelism in the character of Harold Hunting was so well depicted by William Bernard that he received the compliment of a cordial and hearty round of hisses from the gallery. The Wife 27-1.

A Convict's Daughter at Cordray's 19-25 duplicated its success of last year by crowding the house for the opening and scoring a financial success for the balance of the week. The role of Edith Gould was cleverly presented by Jewell Darrell, while W. R. Ogden and Lee Daniel scored and were cored for their good work as the hero and the villain respectively. Barbara Fretchie is the bill 26-31, with On the Stroke of Twelve and Finnigan's Ball underlined.

JERSEY CITY.

The Eight Bells came to the Academy of Music Oct. 27-1 to packed houses. This makes about the ninth annual visit, and from appearances the play can make "steen" more visits. The funny revolving ship scene, the fire escape episode and the trick horse carriage are as mirth-provoking as ever. Charles F. McCarthy still plays McGeagle in the usual capital manner, assisted by Joe La Rose, Harry E. Baker, Dan C. McCarthy, Green Baker, Mabel and Dora Ford, Emma Mortella, Maude McCarthy, and the Reyno Brothers. Many good specialties are introduced. Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar in Foxy Grandpa 2-8. Lovers' Lane 26-29.

Hot Grilby, a new melodrama, was the offering at the Bijou Theatre 27-1 to good audiences. The climaxes are calculated to work the audience up to a high pitch. Such scenes as a gold mine on the elevated in Union Square park, New York, with a mixed vocal on the stage; the explosion of a powder house and a leap for life by the heroine from a burning building are only a few of the thrillers. A Tammany Hall politician representative fine play, and he has many good lines. The scenery and effects are numerous and good, and the play will become popular among the popular houses. Walker A. Whiteside was very good as a New York politician. The villain is Will D. Hawkes, a comedian from this city. He is very likeable in his eccentric but otherwise, he spoke all the lines he got. A. H. Wood has a "hit" part as the detective that he plays capitally. Annette Hallmark as the lover and representative of the piece is correct. Thomas F. Morrissey as the impossible Irish policeman, comes with the scenery. Florence Wood is a comedienne of soubrette, and plays her part of Nora with ability. Dora Ebert as Constance, and Alta West as Mary are good. Other small parts are by Ed Rivers, John F. Nolan, Fred Matthews, Johnnie Morrisey, and Thomas A. Ryan. Brandon Tynan in Robert Emmet 2-8. Hanlon's Superbas 10-15.

The name of the Bijou Theatre is now being read in the clouds nightly by means of a kite flying advertising system. The name of the attraction also appears.

Signor Machitelli: John E. Langdon, of the Academy of Music, has repaired the scenic equipment at Elks' Hall.

The Knights of Columbus are arranging a theatre party at the Academy of Music for Andrew Mack when he opens Dec. 1.

Lyric Band commenced rehearsals at Elks' Hall 28.

WALTER C. SMITH.

NEW ORLEANS.

For week of Oct. 26-1 the feature at the Grand Opera House was the first appearance of Everett Hastings, the new leading man of this stock co. The Christian was the offering, and as John Storm Mr. Hastings gave a fine impersonation. The Glory of Leading Women was an admirable effort. Allen Trent Hunt gave to the role of Polly Love the requisite pathos, and Ray Van Dusor, as Bettie, acted with spirit and vivacity. Linda Montgomery did excellent character work as Mrs. Callender, and the Horatio Drake of Lorrimer Johnstone was clever and natural. Frank Sheridan, as the nonchalant Lord Robert Ure, was very good. The play was well acted throughout and the staging satisfactory. The attendance has been the best of the season. The City of New York 2-8.

The ever funny Frank Daniels and an excellent supporting co. presented Miss Simplicity at the Tulane Theatre 26-1 to large attendances. As My Man Hennessy, Mr. Daniels is afforded an opportunity to maintain his reputation, which he does with success. Kate Uart, as Lady Dorothea, was pretty, and Mal Lowry, as Rosalie, who does the greater part of the singing, was efficient, and made a decided impression. As the Countess, Grace Orr Meyers was charming. The chorus was pretty and worked harmoniously, and the scenery left nothing to be desired. Sun Toy 2-8.

The Mountebank held the boards at the Audubon Theatre 26-1, and the Baldwin-Melville Stock co. presented the play in a highly satisfactory manner. The co. was congenially cast, and Lester Lonergan, as Beiphegor, and Amelia Gardner, as Madeline, were given fine opportunities, and of which they took good advantage. Una Clayton, as Beiphegor's son, was very cute in boy attire, and was at times quite acrobatic. Lake Cannon in the heavy role and Gisnio Sevella and L. O. Hart made the most of their respective roles. The Octoroon 2-8.

At the Crescent Theatre A Stranger in New York and A Trip to Chinatown divided the week of 27-1. Better co., in these plays have been seen here, but this one is sufficiently entertaining in its way. Attendance good. At the Old Creole Rondo 2-8.

There is a rumor current here that the Independent Syndicate are negotiating for a theatre here next season, but nothing definite can be ascertained.

J. MARSHALL QUINTERO.

PROVIDENCE.

Soldiers of Fortune was given a fine presentation at the Providence Opera House Oct. 27-1. Robert Edeson, who made his first appearance in this city as a star, can be credited with a distinct hit. His fine stage presence and earnest acting was appreciated. Harry Harwood shared the honors with the star in an excellent portrayal of MacWilliams. The supporting co. included Ellen Burg, Dorothy Donnelly, Wallace Eddinger, Fraser Coulter, and Dorothy Tennant. The play has a number of intensely dramatic situations and is finely staged. Mrs. Le Moyne in Among Those Present 3-5. Amelia Bingham in A Modern Magdalen 6-8.

The season in Providence would not be complete without the appearance of Joseph Murphy and his engagement at the Empire 27-1 was a very good one. Kerry Gow and Shaun Rhue were the plays, and the star received his customary hearty greeting. The Volunteer Organist 2-8.

The Imperial's offering 27-1 was The Heart of Maryland and large business was done. Of the many interesting features in the play none appeals more strongly to the audience that the belfry scene. Alma Kruger made a hit in the role of Maryland Calvert. Other parts were well played by R. J. Murphy, Frank MacDonald, and Herbert Bostwick. Old Heads 2-8.

The Heart of Chicago, one of last season's successes, returned to the Park Theatre 27-1 and did a large business. The presenting co., headed by T. A. Morris and Louise Dunbar, was good. A Ragged Hero 2-8.

Albert Marsh, one of the popular members and assistant stage-manager of the Albee Stock co., visited friends here last week.

Colonel Wendelschaefer while in New York recently booked Iris for the Providence Opera House. The Bostonians have also been booked for a week in Maid Marion.

The first Arion concert of the season will be given in Infantry Hall Dec. 2, when Mendelssohn's Elijah will be sung. Gwillym Miles will sing the title-role.

Mascagni and his opera co. will give a concert in Infantry Hall 7.

Sky Farm played to capacity business at the Imperial 20-25 and broke all records at that house.

Patrons of the Providence Opera House are pleased to again see Treasurer "Gene" Wendelschaefer back in his office after a short illness.

HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

NEWARK.

Political meetings, campaigning and conventions may draw crowds, but even larger crowds find their way to the playhouses, again proving that "peace hath its victories as well as war."

Dolly Varden, as prettily mounted and dressed as any production ever seen here, held the stage at the Newark Oct. 27-1 to audiences that were far below the deserts of the opera, the star or the co. Lulu Glaser's Dolly Varden was a dainty, captivating sprite, and her rendition of the different numbers was almost beyond criticism. The other parts were well sustained, and the chorus was excellent. The Four Cohans 2-8.

The King of Detectives filled the Empire 27-1, and thrilled the audiences to their hearts' content. Laurens Hascall, a former member of the Blaney Stock co., enacted the title-role in a manner to delight the gallery. E. L. Walton was a good Skivinski, Ogden Wright did well as Tommy Baxter, as did Madeline Lack at Betsy Booth. Ann Fairchild was good in the part of Olga Humphreys. The scenery was good. The Eight Bells 3-8.

Alaska drew capacity audiences at the Columbia 27-1, and met a cordial reception. The part of Jim Shoopum was well played by Louis Hartmann, while Lincoln J. Plummer effectively portrayed Hans. St. George Hussey made a hit as the Widow Quinn. The other members of the co. were capable. The scenery was adequate. Man to Man 2-8.

The Fadettes of Boston played their audiences at Richardson's 27-1. Mag was Miss Neal was satisfactory in the part of Gilbert Vaughan. Maud Rehm Hall had a part that taxed her abilities, but acquitted herself admirably as Pauline Marsh. Ella Bailey Robertson's Priscilla Dean was clever. Horace Seymour did well in the part of Thorne. James J. Plummer and Walter Bruce each capably portrayed dual parts. Taylor Holmes and Frank Richardson consistently represented Anthony Marsh and Dr. Orpert, respectively. Fanny Shearer amused as Jacob. The Woman in Black 2-8.

C. L. NELSON.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Gertrude Coghlan gave Alice of Old Vincennes at the Metropolitan Theatre Oct. 26-28 to good business. Miss Coghlan made a very favorable impression in the title-role; Madge Douglas was very entertaining as Nanette; Beatrice Prather made the most of Janet; David M. Murray was a dignified Colonel Hamilton—in fact, too much so; Joseph Cusack gave a very satisfactory impersonation of Father Beret; Sidney Irving made the most of Lieutenant Beverly. Exceptionally novel and pleasing stage effects.

Elsie De Wolfe appeared at the Metropolitan Theatre 27-29 in The Way of the World to excellent business, and made a decided hit in the part of the wife. Her support was good throughout. John Mason, W. T. Ellsworth, Grace Hyer, and Harrison Hunter contributed gave them ordinarily good work in their respective roles.

Those perennial favorites, Ward and Vokes, opened for a week at the Bijou Opera House 26 in The Head Waiters to a packed house and made the usual euphonic hit. The piano were lustfully amusing in their specialties. Margaret Daly Vokes, Lucy Daly, Fred Whitfield, May Harvey and Dan Coleman did excellent work. The Tuxedo Ladies' Band and the "Hard Shell Baptist Choir" were taking features.

The Ferris Stock co. appeared in "Way Out West at the Lyceum Theatre 26, opening to S. R. O. Dick Ferris was eminently satisfactory in the dual role of Captain Ortgosby and Sam Ortgosby. W. H. Murdock was, as usual, equal to the part assigned him. Joseph Rasmus was effective as the Colonel. Bert McCann gave an admirable impersonation of Cross Dog, the Indian Chief. Maude Cecil and Grace Hayward were also happily cast.

F. C. CAMPBELL.

OMAHA.

At Boyd's Theatre All On Account of Eliza played to fair business Oct. 21, 22. Edward Lee as Hechstrubble was excellent. Miss McKinny as Elizabeth Carter was also good. Other parts were capably handled. A Modern Magdalen was given by Amelia Bingham's co. 24, 25. The piece is unnecessarily low in tone, but the different parts are in capable hands. W. J. Ferguson as Hiram Jenkins and Rosella Knott as Katinka were excellent. The audiences were deeply impressed. Business was good. Stella Mayhew in On the Suwanee River played to two good audiences 26. Miss Mayhew as the black Mammy does a piece of character work that would be hard to equal. After an absence of some four years Do Wolf Hopper drew two fine audiences in his new musical comedy, Mr. Pickwick. While Mr. Hopper never loses his individuality he is always quaint and amusing and carries his audience with him to a degree seldom equalled by any other comedian in his particular line. Digby Bell made a hit as Sam Weller, as did Harry Norman in the part of Tony. The Arabella of Louise Gunning was excellent, Miss Gunning having a good voice as well as a pleasing presence. Marguerite Clarke as Polly captivated the house. The opera is well staged and Mr. Hopper's curtain speech as usual was a pleasing feature. The Wrong Mr. Wright 2. U. T. C. 3, 4. His Excellency 5, 6. Stuart Robson 7, 8. The Village Postmaster 9, 10. Adelaide Philip 11, 12. Sothern, 14, 15. The Liberty Belles 16, 17. The Game Keeper 18, 19. Reserved 20.

JOHN M. RINGWALT.

CLEVELAND.

Otis Skinner was seen in Lazarre at the Euclid Avenue Opera House Oct. 27-29. It is a finished production and the star was seen at his best in the title-role. The co. is strong. Maude Durbin as Eagle De Ferrier was excellent. Nanette Comstock was successful in the role of Anabel De Chaumont. Charles B. Wells made up well as Napoleon, and the rest of the cast were good. Joseph Jefferson opened an engagement of three nights and a matinee in Rip Van Winkle 30, which was repeated at Saturday matinee. The Rivals was the bill Friday, and for the closing performance The Cricket on the Hearth and Lend Me Five Shillings. Bertha Galland 2-8.

Spotless Town was the attraction at the Lyceum Theatre 27-1 and seemed to please the clientele. It was given by a fairly good co. Six Egg Alley 2-8.

At the Cleveland Theatre Only a Shop Girl held the boards 27-1 and made a hit. Lottie Williams plays the leading part of Josie the street girl with much feeling. The rest of the characters were in good hands. Her marriage Vow 2-8.

Work on the new Colonial Theatre on Superior Street is being pushed, so as to complete it by the first of the year. It will then be entitled by precedence to the title of Colonial, as the new theatre on Prospect Street has selected that name, being next to the Colonial Hotel.

While the Mascagni operas were thoroughly enjoyed by those present 25, the attendance at the performances was not as large as anticipated.

Madame Sembrich was accorded an enthusiastic greeting at her song recital at Grays Armory 27.

WILLIAM CRAWTON.

DENVER.

The Tivoli Opera co. closed a very successful two weeks' engagement at the Broadway Oct. 26. The operas presented during the season have been The Toymaker, The Serenade, and The Idol's Eye. The co. in its entirety has been well received and individual hits have been scored by Ferris Hartman and Annie Meyer, while Edward Webb, Arthur Cunningham, and Bertha Davis have also made favorable impressions. Business has been large. Tim Murphy will be the next attraction.

At the Tabor, Lost River was the attraction 12-18, and was followed by The Belle of New York 19-25. The attractive music of The Belle of New York still carries it along the road of prosperity, but the present co. would do well to send the costumes and lingerie used in the production to a laundry. Mason and Mason in Rudolph and Adolph will appear next.

Under the efficient and aggressive management of Messrs Felton and Shuster the Curtis Theatre is rapidly becoming recognized as the favorite theatre of the masses. The James Boys in Missouri 19-25 did large business. At the Empire, Over the Fence was the offering 19-25

F. E. CARNTARPHEN.

LOUISVILLE.

The Grace Cameron Opera co. was heard in A Normandy Wedding at Macauley's Oct. 27-29. It is a tuneful musical composition and was acceptably well presented, the star being ably assisted by May Cressy, Daisy King, Genevieve Reynolds and Harry Bowers. The Cincinnati German Comedy co. presented Alt Heidelberg at Macauley's 29 to 3 large audiences.

CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN.—HYPERION THEATRE (G. B. Bunnell, manager): S. Miller Kent offered The Cowboy and the Lady to fair business Oct. 24. The title-role was excellently played by Mr. Kent, and his support is to be commended. Ella Harman and Emerin Campbell were especially notable. Andrew Mack gave his familiar comedy. Tom Moore, 25 to large and pleased gathering. It is far and away the best play Mr. Mack has ever had and will probably serve him for some time. Eddie Herron as usual won much applause for his fine work. Mr. Mack was in good voice and sang several new songs delightfully. Mildred Holland was somewhat slighted in attendance 27, but what the audience lacked in numbers they made up in applause and appreciation. Miss Holland gave a careful and thoughtful presentation and was ably supported. S. R. O. was displayed shortly after 7:30 Mr. 30, and many of Viola Allen's friends must wait until next season to see her in The Eternal City. The play made a most favorable impression and it is conceded to be the greatest play yet offered by Miss Allen. The story is closely followed with the exception of the idea upon the fair heroine's name, a well timed omission. The part fits this popular star and her work is consummation and painstaking. The work of Mr. Holland as the Pope is remarkably clean cut and polished. Mr. Morgan is a fine Beast. The rest of the co. is up to the high standard maintained by Messrs. Liebler and Co., while the costumes and settings are handsome and correct. Mary Manning's premier production of Clyde Fitch's new play, The Stubbornness of Geraldine 31-1. Amelia Bingham 3. The Rogers Brothers in Harvard 4, 5. Henry Miller 6. James O'Neill 7. Are You a Mason 8.——NEW GRAND OPERA HOUSE (G. B. Bunnell, manager; W. H. Van Buren, assistant manager): Wine, Women and Song, a jolly burlesque entertainment, with many clever people and several excellent specialties, to good business 27-29. A Kentucky Feud, a melodrama of the Blue Grass State, drew top-heavy houses 30-1. Thrilling situations, comic illustrations and humorous characters abound. The play is well mounted and cast. Alaska 3-5. King of Detectives 6-8.——ITEMS: Hall Caine spent 29-30 in this city.—Miss Allen was entertained by friends while here last week.—The Kneisel Quartette will give a series of concerts in College Hall this season. JANE MARLIN.

HARTFORD.—PARSON'S THEATRE (H. C. Parsons, manager): Corse Payton's Stock co. closed the week's engagement Oct. 25 to continued flourishing business. Hall Caine's much heralded Eternal City 27, 28, was an elaborate production, and the many scenes were magnificently staged. Viola Allen in the star part, received much praise for her strong acting. The co. was large and carefully selected and included Edward Morgan, Frederic de Belleville, and E. M. Holland. The attendance at both performances filled every seat, and applause was frequent and enthusiastic. A large audience laughed through Are You a Mason 29. It has been enjoyed here before. John C. Rice and Harry Mills, as the chief mirth provokers, were as funny as ever. Amy Muller and Sally Cohen also contributed largely to the success. W. E. Perkins in Jerome, the Poor Man 30. Mildred Holland 1. Henry Miller 3. Mrs. Le Moyne 6. Rogers Brothers 7, 8. Huckleberry Finn 11.——NEW HARTFORD OPERA HOUSE (Jennings and Graves, managers): Fiddle Dee Dee closed the week 25 to record breaking business. The Christian was given four performances 27, 28, to crowded houses. Clara Blandick was excellent, and Stanton Elliot was very effective as John Storm. The same scenery was used as in the Viola Allen production. Large audience greeted Smith O'Brien 29 in The Game Keeper, a dramatic Irish play, in which many well rendered songs are introduced. He was well supported and special fine scenery was used. Le Voyage en Suisse 30, 31. The Great White Diamond 1. A Kentucky Feud 3-5. A WESTERN READER'S COMMENT.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

"GENTLEMEN:—Enclosed find money order for ninety cents in payment for a Mirror Binder. I consider the Binder indispensable to those who keep the Mirror on file. I am of the opinion that the older the copies become the more valuable they are. Especially is this true in regard to Western theatregoers, as it is usually about one year after a play is produced in New York that we have the pleasure of viewing it, and then it becomes a positive novelty to be able to note the cast and excellent criticism of the play as given in the Mirror when it was originally produced."

A THEATRE MANAGER'S USE OF THE BINDER.

"GENTLEMEN:—I have been having so much trouble to keep track of copies of The Mirror in the past, that I want you to send me by mail a Mirror Binder. As your paper is invaluable, I wish to have it for reference at all times. I get two copies each week from our news agent here, one I keep intact, the other I cut clippings from, particularly the correspondence from different cities regarding the various attractions."

FRED RAYMOND'S ATTRACTIONS.

The Missouri Girl (Eastern)
9TH SEASON.
Doing a record breaking business. Mostly return dates. The show that always draws.

Old Arkansaw
3D SEASON.
Turning 'em away most every performance. Also on return date trip. Must like the show.

Time All Filled, Thank You.

We challenge any show on the road of the same calibre to show larger box-office receipts than these attractions.

The Missouri Girl (Western)
2D SEASON.
Duplicating its previous business in the West. See the reports of S. R. O. coming in thick and fast.

My Frisky Dad
A Musical Comedy-Drama. An entirely new and original idea in play building. Will open early next August with a large company and loads of scenery.

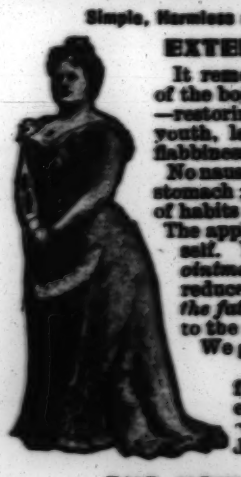
Wash Your Fat Away

—WITH—

HOWARD OBESITY OINTMENT.

Simple, Harmless and Inexpensive.



EXTERNAL REMEDY.

It removes fat from that part of the body to which it is applied—restoring the natural bloom of youth, leaving no wrinkles or flabbiness.

No nauseous drugs that ruin the stomach; no dieting; no change of habits whatever.

The application is simplicity itself. You merely apply the ointment to the part you wish reduced, then literally "wash the fat away" without injury to the most delicate skin.

We guarantee results.

We will send full information in plain sealed envelope and treat your communication as confidential.

Big Business All Around—Bills Past and to Come—Hall's Homely Homilies.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.

With faultless Fall weather, excellent attractions and wonderful business at theatres, every one appears to be thoroughly satisfied in this neck of the woods just now. At the Grand Opera House Mrs. Fiske has made the artistic hit of the year in Mary of Magdala, and the capacity of the theatre is being tested at every performance. Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, the leader of the Jewish people in the West, spoke last Sunday from his pulpit of the translation of Paul Heyse's great play and advised his people to see it, because of its value as a literary work. On the opening night at the Grand, he occupied a box with his family and declared that the superb acting added much to the impressiveness of the work. During the week clergymen of all creeds have witnessed the splendid performance and have joined with the critics in praising play, star and company, especially Mrs. Fiske, Mr. Power and Mr. Woodruff. Mrs. Fiske remains here two weeks more and then goes direct to the Manhattan Theatre, New York, opening there on Nov. 10.

The October dinner of the Forty Club was given at the Wellington last Tuesday, and among the club guests were William H. Crane, Tyrone Power, John W. Ransone, Howell Hansel, Frank Burbeck, Frank Finley, Sheridan Tupper, Judge Jenkins, of Milwaukee; Will McCart, Edward E. Rosenbaum, John R. McWade, and Judge Kohlsaat.

Mr. Crane closes a banner engagement of two weeks at Powers' to-night and on Monday Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott open for three weeks in Mrs. Ryley's play, The Altar of Friendship. It has been many days since "Nattie" has been with us, and the advance sale indicates that the fire is still burning for him on friendship's local altar.

Next week's the last of The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast at the Illinois. It will be succeeded by The Wild Rose, with Eddie Foy and James McCree in the cast.

Next week is the seventh of the successful run of The Prince of Pilsen at the Studebaker. Composer Luders was here early in the week and led the orchestra for a night or two. He has left for a trip abroad and his co-conspirator, Pixley, soon goes to California to recuperate. They will collaborate on a new opera, with the aid of the telegraph and cable companies.

Next Wednesday evening Burton Holmes begins his series of illustrated lectures in the Studebaker Music Hall, opening with Portugal. The series will extend over four weeks and the advance sale is very large. When a man can go to Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Portugal for a $2 note he is getting a bargain.

This evening Way Down East ends a successful engagement at McVicker's, and to-morrow night Blanche Walsh opens in her new play, The Daughter of Hamilcar, supported by Charles Dalton, Rose Coland, and others. Her character is that of Salammbo.

A local preacher recently declared that Richard Mansfield was a blasphemer who disregarded the Sabbath, and Mr. Mansfield threatens a libel suit. This promises a relief from the current war of the local billposters.

Madame Sembrich had a great house Thursday night at her Auditorium song recital, and the Theodore Thomas Orchestra entertained many music lovers there yesterday afternoon and this evening.

All of the real swells and the dead game sports have been taking in the horse show at the Coliseum this week. It has been a financial and social success and incidentally there have been a few horses in evidence.

Harrison Grey Fiske, who came to see Mary of Magdala successfully launched, returned to New York on Tuesday.

Joseph M. Sparks has been drawing large audiences at the Great Northern in Mr. O'Reilly, and he will be followed by A Runaway Girl at the matinee to-morrow.

The stock at the Columbus follows The White Heather to-morrow with At the White Horse Tavern.

The patrons of the Academy of Music appear to be leading a strenuous life these days. The Black Vipers follows Devil's Island over there to-morrow. Further up the street at the Bijou things do not look so hopeless, for Human Hearts will be succeeded to-morrow by For Love and Honor.

Adolf Phillipp closes his run of New York at the Bush Temple of Music to-morrow and will follow it Monday evening with a revival of The Corner Grocer of Avenue A. He has captivated the German Northsiders.

Two of the strongest attractions in town this week have been James J. Corbett and Terrence McGovern. The Road to Ruin, in which McGovern stars, is to be succeeded at the Alhambra to-morrow by The Night Before Christmas, in which the well-known heavyweight, Elmer Grandin, figures.

Over at the New American the stock company will follow Roanoke to-morrow with The Power of Love.

The many professional friends of "Charlie" Clayton will no doubt be pained to learn that he is hopelessly blind here in St. Luke's Hospital. A $5 subscription from his old friends was recently headed by Mrs. Joseph Jefferson, Charley Jefferson, and others, and I will take care of any $5 bill sent to me for him. "Charlie" always did his share for professional unfortunates.

Over at Glutman's Yiddish Theatre The Prince of Arabia is to be followed by A Golden Country Comedy.

The New Orpheum is rapidly becoming a popular resort for lovers of clean burlesque, and Halnan, Vidocq, and the others are making many friends in Chow Chow.

Manager Savage's Castle Square Opera company opens its Winter season at the Studebaker on Dec. 1, and The Prince of Pilsen will hold the boards there until that time.

Over at the Criterion to-morrow Manager Lincoln J. Carter will follow The Queen of the Highway with Devil's Island.

Our old friend, "Young Bill" Betts, writes that his daughter, Dorris, aged eight weeks, went on for the first time recently as Young Jesse James in the George Klimt's James Boys (Eastern) in Missouri.

On the opening night of the horse show the nag in David Harum came on with a blue ribbon on his halter and the timely hint made a hit with the people in front.

A phenomenal feature of the local theatrical season thus far has been the big business enjoyed by the stock houses and the outside houses. The Children of Satan is still doing well at the Dearborn and all of the other outlying houses are playing to gratifying business.

De Wolf Hopper will soon be seen at the Grand in her new musical comedy, Mr. Pickwick, which is said to have made a hit.

"BIFF" HALL.

BOSTON.

Nascagni—Duse's Illness—Weber and Fields Lease New Theatre.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BOSTON, Nov. 1.

There is no question about the event in which the chief interest centres next week, for the Mascagni Opera company will be here and Boston Music Hall will again be turned to the uses for which it was intended. It is a good place for Mascagni to bring his musicians to the hall where Boston's best musical programmes have been given for so many years. The season will be opened Nov. 3, with Iris. The conspicuous event of the Boston engagement will be 5, when Rantzau will be given for the first time on the American stage. This will be a distinct novelty that New York has not seen, but all the others have been given there. Joseph Murphy will finish up the week.

Most interesting of the changes in dramatic bills which will be made in Boston next week will be the opening of E. S. Willard to the Tremont, for the positive announcement is made that he will remain in England several years after this and will not return to America for some time. The plays for the opening week of his engagement at the Tremont will be The Cardinal and David Garrick, and he will play his complete repertoire in the course of his stay here.

Charles Richman and Margaret Anglin, leading the Empire Theatre Stock company, will come to the Hollis, bringing The Wilderness, which has never been seen in Boston. One of the interesting accessions to the company will be William Courtleigh, who was for some time the leading man at the Castle Square.

The Defender will continue its long run at the Columbia, and no interruption of the engagement is in sight. Business is very large, and the company gives a brisk performance that brings the greatest of satisfaction even if some of the players have not quite the reputation of the leaders of the original cast.

Thomas E. Shea will come to the Grand Opera House next week to play a widely varied repertoire, in which The Hunchback's Daughter, a new adaptation of The Fool's Revenge, will be the chief novelty. The Pledge of Honor will have the most repetitions of the week, although The Bells and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde will also be given.

Charles Hawtrey will continue his engagement at the Museum, but A Message from Mars has passed its half-way mark and only three weeks more remain. Mr. Hawtrey has made decidedly the most distinct social success that Boston has made thus far, and he is being entertained at all the clubs. His English associates also share in his popularity.

Denman Thompson will keep on at the Boston with The Old Homestead, which continues to pack the great house as it did years ago. There was especial interest in one of the performances last week when the Prince of Siam and his party occupied boxes and greatly enjoyed the play.

The Show Girl will be the bill at the Colonial next week, but it will be an entirely new production from that which was seen in this city last Spring after the cadets had finished with the production. From New York came the report that Katherine Hutchinson would leave the company, but the change will not be made until after the Boston engagement. The cast is a much better balanced one than the one which first produced the piece professionally.

An old favorite will be revived at the Castle Square next week, and The Three Musketeers will be given with a cast almost entirely different from that which first gave this play the first time that it was presented here. John Craig will play D'Artagnan, which should add another to his list of strong parts. Lillian Lawrence has already established her success in this play.

Corse Payton's Stock company will make a change of bill at the Park next week, and will present All the Comforts of Home, which has always been popular since the days of the old Museum Stock company. It will be interesting to compare the work of the two stock companies.

Slaves of Russia will be the melodrama to be produced at the Bowdoin Square next week by the stock company, with Zelie Tilbury in the leading role. Utah has been especially well received there this week.

Duse's illness made a troublesome turn to affairs at the Tremont this week, but she lost only one performance, 30. The trouble was due to the nervous strain following three important productions, and she was in such a condition that she could not undergo the task of a strenuous play like Francesca da Rimini. There was great disappointment, for the Crown Prince of Siam and his party were planning to occupy boxes, and the advance sale for that performance amounted to more than $2,000, which had to be refunded. The rest of one night restored her to perfect strength, and she was able to go on and finish the engagement without any difficulty. She will appear in New York next week. In Francesca da Rimini Duse scored in many respects the greatest success of her engagement. The piece was presented by Duse's entire company.

There were many who considered this the most attractive production of the entire Duse engagement, for there were none of the repulsive features which characterized some of the D'Annunzio theories. The familiar love there of the tragedy of Paolo and Francesca was given a new turn by the Italian dramatist, and the mediæval settings were especially effective with their strange methods of warfare and all the other manners of the time. It was a notable spectacular production, by all odds the most elaborate that Duse has given here, and the week would have been a record breaker had it not been for the night when the performance had to be given up.

Weber and Fields have taken the ten years' lease of the new Washington Street Theatre that is to be built by the Robert B. Brigham estate. The document was recorded this week, and a number of interesting things are shown in the document. The lessee agree that nothing but first-class plays shall be produced. Weber and Fields will have complete control of the new building with power to sublet. The occupancy will date from Sept. 1, 1903, and the annual rental will be $25,000. It is especially agreed that no speculators shall be allowed to sell tickets in the outhalles or halls of the theatre.

The strike of the union workmen employed upon the new Majestic Theatre on Tremont Street has been called off by the Building Trades' Council, and the union men returned to work yesterday. The differences between the unions and the employers were laid before the owner of the building, Eben D. Jordan, and he decided that all future work should be done by union men.

Frank Richards has had a royal reception from Boston friends upon his return in advance of The Show Girl. This is his first visit here since his serious illness last Spring.

Bonnie Hoyt, the chorus girl who died in Chicago last week, has been identified as the daughter of William Windsor, a professor of phrenology. She was with The Prince of Pilsen company.

E. P. Cheney, the husband of Julia Arthur, has completed his house on his island in the harbor. It is interesting that he can see the flagstaff and flag from his rooms at the Parker House, his city residence.

The funeral of Mrs. Cynthia A. Field, wife of R. M. Field, of the Boston Museum, was held Monday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock at the home of her mother, Mrs. Charles Endicott, on Washington Street, Canton. The services were conducted by Rev. C. Franklin Andrews, of the First Universalist Church, assisted by Rev. John Vannevar, of Concord, N. H. The burial was in the family lot at Canton Cemetery.

Roland S. Simonds, who was formerly in the business department of the Castle Square, has started as manager of the Empire Stock company, a new repertoire organization which will tour New England. East Lynne and Master and Man are among the plays to be presented.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.

There has been nothing of special interest to attract theatregoers this week to the high-priced houses, and thus far this season the managers of these places have not observed an over abundance of prosperity.

Sally in Our Alley is meeting with fair houses and remains for another week. It pleases the masses. The Chaperons, originally produced here with failure, is booked to return Nov. 10 to the Walnut Street Theatre.

Kyrle Bellew in A Gentleman of France is attracting good patronage at the Garrick, and remains for another week, and will be followed by Lulu Glaser in Dolly Varden Nov. 10.

Francis Wilson in The Toreador closed his six weeks' engagement to-night at the Chestnut Street Theatre, a rather lengthy term, but failed to draw the big money anticipated. The ever popular Anna Held, in The Little Duchess, opens here Nov. 3 for two weeks. There is a tremendous advance sale, just as during her stay last season.

Florodora closes a two weeks' engagement to-night at the Chestnut Street Opera House, business very light. Jefferson Bylas in The Billionaire follows Nov. 3. Harris Adams 17. The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast 24.

The Baxter Theatre company in The Wilderness and their two weeks' engagement to-night at the Broad Street Theatre. Jefferson De Angelis, with his latest venture, The Emerald Isle, will sit in Nov. 3-8. Julia Marlowe's date, Nov. 10-22, has been cancelled, with likelihood of Virginia Harned Nov. 24, to be shifted to a later date.

Henrietta Crossman's date in this city is Thanksgiving week, Nov. 24, at the Academy of Music.

Lafayette and his company attracted crowded houses this week at the Auditorium. The feature beginning Nov. 3, for a two weeks' engagement, is Sidney Ellerby's Around the World in Eighty Days.

The Park Theatre offers for Nov. 3-8 George W. Monroe in The Doings of Mrs. Dooley, with Raymond Finley, Lottie Burke, John Donohue, Mattie Nichols, Anna Keswick, Harry Walters, James Lee, Edwin Lopez, and Rosie Claytone.

Theodore Kremer's For Her Children's Sake will receive its first local production at the National week of Nov. 3. Selma Herman will enact the leading role.

Florence Roberts is out of the cast at Forepaugh's on account of sickness, Jennie Hilson enacting the lead in her place.

The Fatal Wedding, after doing good service for two weeks at another theatre, is announced at the People's Nov. 3 for a week.

The Kensington will present Barney Gilmore in Kidnapped in New York Nov. 3-8.

The Grand Opera House Stock company will appear Nov. 3-8 in Woman and Wine. Business continues large.

The Girard Avenue Theatre Stock announces The Burglar Nov. 3-8.

Forepaugh's Stock will present Nov. 3-8 The Bauble Shop, with all the favorites in the cast. Manager William Miller is improving the standard and business of this profitable playhouse.

Carrie Radcliffe's Stock at the Columbia offer week of Nov. 3 The Wages of Sin.

Darcy and Speck's Stock at the Standard appear week of Nov. 3 in My Old Kentucky Home.

The Wurster German Stock at the Arch Street announce as their repertoire for the coming week The Well Digger, The Kind Relations, Fedora, and A Mad Idea.

Dumont's Minstrels at the Eleventh Street Opera House have a new local burlesque, The Hypnotized Man, excellent programme, large patronage.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra open their local season at the Academy of Music Nov. 3. The house is sold out. The Philadelphia Orchestra, under Fritz Scheel, inaugurated their season here Oct. 31.

Nat Goodwin—The Liberty Belles and Up York State—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Goodwin were well received at the Olympic this week in their new play, The Altar of Friendship. The play, while resembling their former success, When We Were Twenty-one, yet gave splendid scope for these talented stars. The usual large Goodwin audiences attended.

On Monday evening E. H. Sothern will return to the Olympic with his success of last season, If I Were King. Richard Mansfield Nov. 10.

The Liberty Belles did good business at the Century. To-morrow evening we are to see our old favorite, De Wolf Hopper, for the first time in several seasons. We have heard many complimentary things about his new musical production, Mr. Pickwick. Among his support are Digby Bell, Laura Joyce Bell, Grant Stewart, Henry Norman, Louise Gunning, Marguerite Clark, Louise Payne, and J. K. Adams. Primrose and Dockstader's Minstrels Nov. 9.

David Higgins and Georgie Waldron have a very pleasing play in Up York State, and it was enthusiastically received by good audiences at the Grand all week. The next Grand attraction, beginning Sunday afternoon, will be All On Account of Eliza, that was seen at the Century two seasons ago with Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in the leading roles.

Farce was the line of attraction at Havlin's this week. McFadden's Row of Flats in an entirely new edition pleased large audiences. The list of entertainers was almost an entirely new one. The chorus was pretty, and credit is to be given for the originality in staging and costuming. The effects of the latter were bright. For next week, beginning with the usual Sunday matinee, A Desperate Chance will occupy the boards.

In Convict Stripes did well at the Imperial and pleased the large audiences immensely. A novel sight was the daily parade of their band in the convict stripe uniform. For next week Manager Russell announces a revival of the Rays' A Hot Old Time, that has broken records at the Grand on several occasions.

Much interest is manifested over the coming illustrated lecture on "Oberammergau, Its People and Its Play," by Harry Ellsworth Feicht, at the Olympic to-morrow evening. Mr. Feicht is an interesting talker. He has lived in Oberammergau longer than any other American. His views are pronounced by the best critics to be the finest ever cast from a stereopticon. The highest indorsement for the merits of his lecture is the fact that it was given twenty-six times in one city and always to the capacity of the theatre. Moving pictures were never taken of any scene in the Passion Play. Mr. Feicht's views were made from photographs secured and taken by him during his residence in Oberammergau and are entirely different from all others. An augmented orchestra, choir singers and chimes will be introduced. Mr. Feicht was for many years a Mirror correspondent.

Guy Lindsley and a number of the pupils of the Lindsley School of Dramatic Art will give the first entertainment of the school's regular series of public performances at the Germania Theatre, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 4. The sparkling comedy, The Honeymoon, will be the attraction.

Drei Paar Schuhe, the musical play by Alois Berla, as interpreted by the Heinz-Wells Stock co., German's Theatre, Sunday evening, was as fetching a production as has been given by the organization since the first of the season. Leona Bergere as Lori was especially effective. Wednesday evening the presentation of Felix Phillipp's Wohlthaeter Der Menschheit was equally pleasing. Sunday the second Der Tolle Wenzel will be the attraction. Die Grille will be the offering Wednesday evening, Miss Bergere appearing in the leading role, Fanchon.

The great society event of the season, the annual horse show, with its brilliant display of women, men, gowns and horses, will be on view at the Coliseum for one week, beginning on next Monday evening.

Louis Mann Fills Julia Marlowe's Time—Decision in Favor of J. S. Duss.

(Special to The Mirror.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.

At the New National, commencing Monday, in place of Julia Marlowe, whose illness has resulted in a cancellation, Louis Mann will be seen in his new play, Hoch, the Consul. Amelia Bingham in A Modern Magdalen is the announcement for the week following.

After a most excellent week at the Columbia, the Four Cohans in The Governor's Son give way to Florodora, and the coming week will undoubtedly repeat the big business done on former visits, as the sale is very large. Then comes Jefferson De Angelis in The Emerald Isle.

The Lafayette Square Opera House announcement for next Monday is the popular Fiddle Dee Dee, with the favorites, John G. Sparks, Rice and Cady, Charles P. Morris, Bobby North, Dorothy Drew, and Henrietta Lee.

Next week's bill at the Academy of Music presents The Royal Lilliputians in Posterland—an attractive exhibit marked "A." A big week is in store. The Fatal Wedding opens Nov. 10.

The recent decision by Judge Hazel in the United States Circuit Court, for the Southern District of New York against the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company of New York, which awarded priority and validity to the patents owned by the Armat Moving Picture Company, of this city, is now believed to successfully control the projection of moving pictures on screens, and decided steps have now been taken by the company, to close out all infringers, by moving for injunctions and suing for damages and profits for past infringements. The Armat Company estimate the number of infringers at 3,000—and the infringement applies not only to the exhibition, but also to the place where the exhibition has taken place.

The Monday matinee at the Lafayette Square will be discontinued in the future, owing to the difficulty of doing justice to the heavier class of scenic productions.

By a decision of the United States Supreme Court, delivered Tuesday, Bandmaster John S. Duss wins the law suit instituted by John Schwartz and others, which involved property held by the Harmony Co-operative Society of Pennsylvania. Schwartz and his associates, who claim to be descendants of former members of the society, brought suit for the purpose of securing a distribution of the society's property, alleging that the organization has ceased to exist, that there are now only eight persons who pretend to be members of the society, and that they are either old men or women and that the management of the property, which amounts in the aggregate to about $4,000,000 in value, is in the hands of Mr. Duss, the senior trustee, and that he is rapidly wrecking the property. There were two questions to be decided, the first, whether Schwartz and others had any proprietary interest; and second, whether the society had been dissolved. The courts decision turned entirely upon the first point and was against the contention of Mr. Schwartz, and Justice McKenna in quoting the article of agreement said: "It was provided that the member who withdrew from the society would make no demand against it as a matter of right. The member who died left no right to his representatives. It needs no argument to show that as such members had no right, they could transmit none to the petitioners in this case." The opinion affirmed the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

The Kneisel Quartette, seventeenth season of fine Tuesday concerts during the Winter, will commence at the Hotel Raleigh Tuesday, Nov. 4.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1.

Viola Allen will present Hall Caine's new play, The Eternal City, at Ford's Grand Opera House next week. Miss Allen is supported by a splendid cast which includes Edward Morgan, Frederick De Belleville, E. M. Holland, and George C. Boniface. Florodora will follow.

Lulu Glaser and her company will present Stange and Edwards' comic opera, Dolly Varden, at the Academy of Music next week.

Beginning Monday night, James H. Wallick's The Bandit King will be seen at the Holliday Street Theatre. Lost River has drawn well this week.

Puddin'head Wilson has been selected as the play to be presented by the George Fawcett Stock company at Chase's next week. Jim the Penman was played to standing room this week.

Mam'selle Awkins will entertain the patrons of the Auditorium, beginning on Monday night. Fiddle-Dee-Dee enjoyed a successful week, closing to-night.

Anna Held had a week of big business at Ford's Grand Opera House.

The first of the season's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be given at Music Hall Tuesday evening next. The soloists will be Nellie Melba, Madame Kirkby Lunn, Van Rooy, Lamond, and Adamowski.

Sousa and his band will give a concert here on Thanksgiving afternoon and evening under the management of Charles E. Ford. The concert will be given in the Fifth Regiment Armory, which is a vast auditorium, but Manager Ford is confident that he will have standing room only.

The first Peabody recital of the season was given yesterday afternoon at Peabody Hall. David Bispham was the soloist.

Innes and his band appeared in concert at the Music Hall this afternoon and evening. Frances Boyden was the soloist and Signor Filippo Sevasta rendered selections upon the harp. The CINCINNATI.

James K. Hackett, Robert Mantell, Nellie McHenry and Others in Town—News Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CINCINNATI, Nov. 1.

Most of the local theatres experienced a reaction this week from the big business that has ruled of late and, with possibly one or two exceptions, business was not above the average.

The only novelty scheduled for next week is James K. Hackett's production of The Crisis, which is to be seen at the Grand. A fine advance sale assures one of the best weeks of the season so far. The company has been resting this week while Mr. Hackett enjoyed a brief vacation in the South.

The Fine company will revive The Little Minister to-morrow, most of the players essaying the same roles that they played so successfully last year. Byron Douglas plays the title part, Mary Hall appears as Babbie, Miss Melville as Nannie, Barry O'Neill as Rob Dow, and Sara Moore as Micah Dow.

Robert Mantell will begin his annual engagement at the Walnut to-morrow. The Dagger and the Cross will be used nearly all the week, but one or two performances of Monbars and The Face in the Moonlight are promised.

The first classic performance of the season by the German Theatre company will be Romeo and Juliet, with Tilli Traun-Schmidkuns as Juliet and Heinrich Neeb as Romeo.

Hazel Kirke, which has not been seen here for several years, will doubtless prove an attractive bill at Robinson's. John William Schmidt has arrived from New York to take charge of this house, relieving Isaac Peyton, who returns to the East.

Nellie McHenry is always a welcome visitor at Heuck's and her reappearance there next week in M'lle will be the cause of a succession of crowded houses.

The Convict's Daughter, one of the solid successes of past seasons at the Lyceum, will be seen at that house again commencing with to-morrow's matinee. H. A. BUTTON.

THE BROOKLYN STAGE.

SATURDAY, Nov. 1.

While some of the theatres have continued to do an excellent business, the pre-election slump in attendance has been noticeable all along the line.

The business of A Modern Magdalen underwent improvement at the Montauk after the first performance. Annie Russell and Mrs. G. H. Gilbert in The Girl and the Judge have had the best results of the current season. The spontaneous and hearty ovation accorded to Mrs. Gilbert at every performance has been something out of the ordinary. Francis Wilson and The Toreador are the underline.

At Hyde and Behman's Sidney De Grey and Nellie Beaumont made merry in Mr. Rice's vaudeville novelty. Their singing proved to be of the highest order, while the dancing specialties excited applause. Milly Capell's first Brooklyn appearance was but a repetition of her former successes with her wonderful horse and dog. Bellina and Moore were excellent in Hester's Surprise. Hines and Remington led as laugh producers, while Hayes and Healy, who do a high-kicking and burlesque circus riding act, won their share of applause. Clarice Vance continues to sing her southern songs catchily. W. H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols have a very laughable act in The Bifurcated Girl. Orth and Fern worked hard in their musical sketch, and deserve much credit. Manager Henry W. Behman's next olio comprise John and James Russell, Gertie Carlisle and Sager Midgley, Ward and Curran, Sullivan and Pasquelena, George Thatcher, the Three Livingstons, Burton and Brooks, the Reeves Midgets, also McKenzie and Ash, and Robert Hilliard headed the next bill.

The delightfully tuneful music of The Wild Rose, supplemented with the charm and naivete of Irene Bentley, and the capital fun-making of Eddie Foy, conspired to greatly please the Amphion's patrons, whom Manager G. M. Cohen next entertained with The Show Girl, following which is Andrew Mack in Tom Moore, its third booking in this section of the borough.

At the Orpheum last week Marshall P. Wilder led one of the best bills of the season. Helene Mora is an old Brooklyn favorite, and was assured beforehand of the hearty welcome her songs received. Kathryn Osterman was delightful in her clever sketch, The Editor, assisted by Edwin Boring. Artie Hall was exceedingly happy with "coon" songs. Franco Piper made his first American appearance and repeated his phenomenal European success. Melville and Stetson pleased with topical songs. Bailey and Madison were at home in a strenuous eccentric comedy act. The Beaux and Belles Octette have an attractive dancing and singing specialty. The Five De Lacos were good in a series of acrobatic features. Rabelle opened the bill with daring feats of equilibrium. "The Kitties," who astonished all concerned with the enormous attendance their first appearance drew at the Academy of Music last January, followed by a phenomenal week at the Orpheum in March, are back to the latter house for next week. Manager Percy Williams presenting in addition, Lew Sully, Lottie Vincent and Frank Gardiner, Tom Brown, Lawrence and Harrington, the Carter-De Haven Trio, also the Dumitrescu, Vernotte, and Dionne Troupe.

Lovers' Lane again proved a profitable feature at the Grand Opera House, where Manager Lewis Parker followed it with The White Slave, and The Chaperons for Nov. 3.

The Star had its wonted prosperity with Clark Brothers' Royal Burlesquers, which Manager William L. Bissell replaces with Rose Hill's English Folly co.

Happy Hooligan's drawing power does not seem impaired by a second season, the "take" at the Folly being as large as last year, Manager W. C. Cameron being authority for the statement that the Saturday matinee had by actual count over fifteen hundred youngsters present, all of whom were apparently not yet in their 'teens. Lovers' Lane has drawn excellently, and gives place to The White Slave for election week.

The Gayety continues to dispute the Star's heretofore ascendancy in capturing banner receipts, The Brigadiers keeping up their end in this procession of record breaking business for Williamsburgh, which Manager James J. Clarke looked to shoving ahead some degrees with Reilly and Wood's Show, and has not been disappointed.

Winchester excited paying interest at the Park, where Man to Man came next, Manager Nick Norton after that turning on The Searchlights of a Great City.

At the Unique, Manager Frank B. Carr presented The Innocent Beauties for the current week.

Suzanne Adams and David Bispham occupied the Academy of Music on Oct. 30, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra has Nov. 7. JUSTAND FAIR.

THE STOCK COMPANIES.

Sudermann's Magda was presented at the Bijou Theatre Oct. 20-25, and the Spooner Stock company repeated its notable performances in the drama of last year. Edna May Spooner gave a portrayal of Magda that taken alone would class her as an emotional actress of undoubted ability. Miss Spooner's conception of the part, while being original, added rather than detracted from the strength of the character, but she lent a womanliness of grace and manner to the role that won sympathy for the misunderstood daughter. Augustus Phillips gave an exceptionally even and intelligent delineation of the part of the Rev. Heffterdingt. Cecil Spooner made a charming Marie, playing with her usual sense of humor and pathos. Robert Ransom was very good as Schwartz, although his make-up was hardly German. His death in the last act was realistic in the extreme. Hal Clarendon hardly realized the character of Dr. Von Keller. Harold Kennedy, as Max von Wendlowski, was a typical German officer in appearance and manner, and he acted the part well. Rita Villiers was good as Augusta Schwartz. Mrs. Spooner as Frau von Keller, Cora Morlan as Frau Ellerich, and Harriett Sweeringin as Frau Schumann, were all inclined to overdo their parts. The Franziska von Wendlowski of Olive Grove was more of a Yankee than a German character. W. L. West and Frank Lindon as Professor Beckmann and General Von Klebs, respectively, more nearly approached the Teutonic atmosphere of the play than the others in the cast. Jessie McAllister made the most of the part of Theresa. The one set was not up to the usual good taste of the company, and many of the properties used conflicted with each other from an artistic view point. Germans, although simple in their tastes, are seldom crude in their selection and arrangement of bric-a-brac and similar home adornments. The theatre was crowded to its capacity at each performance during the week. The company appeared in A Contented Woman last week and capacity audiences again laughed themselves hoarse. Mrs. Spooner was seen as Helena Wrangle; Edna May Spooner played Grace Holme in her usual capable manner, and Cecil Spooner appeared to advantage as Belle Holme. Augustus Phillips was amusing as Benton Holme. Robert Ransom as Uncle Todie, Olive Grove as Aunt Jim, Harold Kennedy as Cutting Hints, Hal Clarendon as Brighton Betts, Ben F. Wilson as Boyle D'Owle, W. L. West as Phil Boyle, Rita Villiers as Mrs. Watson Chinn, Cora Morlan as Mrs. Ebbsmith, and Jessie McAllister as Calliope Ayres were all good. This week, The Jilt.

The Payton Theatre company was seen in The Dangers of a Great City Oct. 20-25. Etta Reed Payton was forced to give up her triple role of Ruth Fielding, May Casey and Sister Alice, owing to a slight injury to one of her ankles. Grace Fox took her place last week, and succeeded admirably in her portrayal of the three parts. Kirk Brown was excellent as Edmund Vaughn, living up to the heroic situations of the play with good effect. Burton Williams was very good as Richard Westbrook. Richard P. Cruliss returned to the cast, playing Larry Lunnion, causing roars of laughter whenever on the stage. George Hoey gave his usual good portrayal as Dr. Krundleby. Claude Payton won sympathy as the suspected clerk, George Fielding. Harold Stroaz, a new member of the company, made a capable villain as Mark Leagard. Frank Payton was good as Inspector Banks. Sadie Radcliffe gave an admirable character sketch as Mother Thunder, and Marie Casmere was capable as Mable Westbrook. The other parts were played acceptably. The scenery was very good. During the third act Johnnie Hoey and Clara Austin, assisted by a sextette of three men and three women, gave a very clever singing and dancing specialty. Capacity audiences prevailed. The Nominee was the bill last week, and the company were highly amusing in the farce. Corse Payton, as Jack Medford, caused roars of laughter. Kirk Brown played Leopold Bunyon capably. W. E. Mortimer was good as Colonel Murray. Claude Payton was acceptable as Porter Vane. Grace Fox again replaced Etta Reed Payton, acting the role of Mabel Medford well. Sadie Radcliffe was very good as Mrs. Van Barclay, while Marguerite Fields as Annie Harrington and Burton Williams as Pete made the most of their small parts. The staging was excellent. Very large audiences attended, considering the coming election week. Next week, Josephine, Empress of the French.

Jim the Penman was the bill at the Columbia Theatre Oct. 20-25 when fair audiences attended. Cal Smith Seerle dropped into his bad mannerisms once more as James Ralston, although he succeeded in some of the later scenes of the play. Grace Reals gave an excellent portrayal of the distracted wife, Mrs. Ralston. Frank Rolleston was an acceptable Louis Percival. Emile Hoch was seen to particular advantage as Baron Hartfeld. George R. Martin was very good as Captain Redwood. Franklyn Munnell as Lord Drelincourt and John Fenton as Dr. Pettywise were capable. George T. Raab, who will leave the company this week, having inherited a large fortune, was very good as George Ralston. Augustine Glassmire as Mr. Netherby and R. A. Breese as Mr. Chalstone played their parts well. The Agnes Ralston of Ann Scaife, the Lady Dunscombe of Kate Jepson, and the Mrs. Chalstone of Edna Earlie Lindon were capable portrayals. The staging was good. Belasco's melodrama, The Stranglers, thrilled fair audiences last week. Carl Smith Seerle was good as Jagore, although his make-up was hardly as villainous as the part called for. Grace Reals was seen to advantage as Mathilda Villeneuve. Emile Hoch as M. Claude, Franklyn Munnell as Joseph Blanchard, and Henry Muller as Robert de Mielland, were good. George E. Mather was amusing as Bontout. Ann Scaif as Jeanne Guerin and Edna Earlie Lindon as Sophie Blanchard, were capable. The scenery was adequate, although some of the stage business lacked good judgment. In one scene Jagore is supposed to be shaved of his beard, but no razor is brought forth or shown. A crowd of convicts simply gather around him and "mysteriously" divest him of his property beard. This week, Mr. Barnes of New York.

The Elite Stock company at the Gotham Theatre presented Niobe Oct. 20-25 to good audiences. Edmund Day played the part of Peter Amos Dunn, while Carolyn Franklin was the Niobe. A revival of Uncle Tom's Cabin was last week's offering.

The Pledge of Honor was the offering of the Blaney Stock company Oct. 20-25. Bert Lytell was seen as Gilbert Vaughn and Iris Maynard played the role of Pauline March. Good houses prevailed. Slaves of Gold was the play last week.

A BROADENING INTEREST.

THAT there is a broadening interest in the theatre at a time when the stage is almost given over to the frivolous and the reprehensible finds new proof steadily. And the fact that there is an awakening interest in the theatre that promises to benefit the stage on the part of many persons directly and indirectly associated with churches is not alone significant of a possible movement that may work a revolution in the drama. This interest truly is remarkable, because it formerly has been the habit of church people when theatre conditions were akin to the conditions that now prevail to sweepingly condemn the stage as of evil effect and without hope of good possibilities.

Something expressive of the new purpose was developed at a meeting of the Church Club last week. This Club is composed of laymen of the Episcopal Church in New York. The Rev. WALTER E. BENTLEY, rector of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, who has been industrious and indefatigable not only in bringing the Actors' Church Alliance to its present state of development, but also in creating a sentiment for the theatre in church circles, explained at this meeting something of the plan in the furtherance of which he will undoubtedly have wide co-operation.

It is purposed eventually to inform church people throughout the country as to the character of plays produced in New York and elsewhere to the end that there may be a concerted movement on the part of a vast body of persons who commonly are and have been non-theatregoers for the encouragement of good and worthy plays by attendance at theatres where such plays are represented, as well as the discouragment of bad plays by non-attendance. The information as to plays will be sent to clergymen in every city of the country, and these clergymen, it is said, with sympathetic and influential laymen, will work quietly among church people to these ends. There is no plan for pulpit denunciation of bad plays, or for any open campaign against such plays, it being believed that all the results aimed at may be accomplished without publicity. This plan was originally intended to be worked out by a committee of the Alliance, but that medium has for a time been abandoned. It is intended to make this informing process a part of the regular machinery of the Alliance and kindred interests as the development of the plan may permit.

There may be an idea generally held among persons familiar with the drama and with human tendencies as to the theatre that a movement like that here disclosed will have an influence not contemplated by those engaged in it, in arousing a curiosity as to bad plays that will lead to a larger patronage of them than would result in ordinary circumstances. This, however, may be doubted, as the work purposed to be carried on will appeal largely to a vast number of persons who will not care for plays of the class the movement is intended to discriminate against. Moreover, this large class of persons, to whom the theatre has in a measure been an unknown institution, will, if it become concerned in the theatre, exert a tremendous force for the better forms of drama as to its interest in which there can be no possible question.

A hardly less significant matter as it relates to the theatre, although until it has had a trial it will be impossible to forecast its effects, is the movement by the Educational Alliance on behalf of the decent drama. No one can question the influence exerted by this organization, whose purpose it is to promote clean minds in sound bodies. For its Winter season this Alliance has planned a new venture in instruction and entertainment to take the form of a theatre in which clean and dignified plays are to be produced at popular prices. In an editorial on this project the New York World has this to say:

> The scheme embodies a better idea than the recent suggestion of an official censor of the stage. Under the powerful auspices of the Alliance there will be offered to great and important audiences, made up in large part of the city's fathers and mothers of the near future, a course of education directly away from the Drama of Dirt. The mischief of indecent and unwholesome plays does not stop among the immediate hearers who are able to pay Broadway prices for seats. It spreads like a contagion, conveying inevitably and into all quarters the most hurtful notions of what is "smart" or "the thing to see" in theatricals. So the lowering even of a semi-exclusive stage has an effect degrading to many more people than it reaches directly. As an offset to the evil influence of the unworthy drama, the Alliance dramatic venture should be heartily commended and aided.

The most careless observer of the drift of affairs that relate to the theatre must see in movements like these a promise of a better stage in the future. There can be no doubt that decent sentiment is fully awake to the fact that the theatre of this country is largely in the hands of persons whose conceptions of what is required of them are at least peculiar, and whose methods as they affect the public should be rebuked.

ECCENTRICITY NOT LOCAL.

It is, perhaps, the habit to think that eccentricity in matters relating to amusements is confined to this country, and even that it is characteristic mainly in the western part of this great land, where conventionalities that are presumed to be followed with more or less fidelity in effete centres are commonly broken.

Recent cablegrams from Italian cities, however, would suggest that even that land of the arts is the home of occasional eccentricity. Women nowadays in the cities of this country, and particularly in the larger cities, generally observe good taste and the comfort of men by removing their hats in the theatre. This may in some places be the result of the threats made in several Legislatures years ago to pass laws requiring uncovered heads at the play. If memory serves faithfully, such a law was made effective in some cities by local ordinance; yet whatever the cause, it now is certain that a majority of the fair sex here do not offend in this matter as they formerly did.

That Italian women stand more firmly upon what they probably consider to be their right to adorn themselves as they please is shown by a dispatch from Verona, where the prefect of police, after publishing a decree that women should dispense with their hats in the theatre, was unable to make the decree authoritative. The test occurred in the Ristori Theatre, and the women strangely were aided and abetted in their defiance by the men, who hooted at the officers that sought to enforce the decree. The result was a scene that led to the abandonment of the play, and the offending women were led out of the theatre, while the prefect expressed his determination still to win his point. Further intelligence as to this matter will be awaited with interest.

Stranger than this affair, and something that probably cannot be paralled here, is the feat of "BANCIA, the World's Champion for Uninterrupted Piano-Playing," advertised recently on the walls of ancient Padua. "BANCIA," said the posters, "will give a piano concert, commencing on Sunday at seven in the morning and concluding on Monday night at eleven—that is, forty hours. During this time the artist will play two hundred and fifty compositions from memory and his Passion Play, breaking off but twice for ten minutes. He will take only liquid food during the performance and medicine prescribed by the doctor. His condition will be notified at regular intervals to the public." No further intelligence of this performance has come to hand, but it assists in showing that no country has a monopoly of strange persons or of eccentric means for promoting public curiosity.

ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE NEWS.

National and Local Headquarters, Manhattan Theatre Building.

The third annual meeting of the Actors' Church Alliance of America adjourned from last June, was held last Tuesday evening, Oct. 28, in St. Chrysostom's Hall, Thirty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue, New York, at 8 o'clock. Bishop Potter, National President of the Alliance, who was prevented from attending owing to the results of a slight but painful accident which occurred a few days previously, was represented by his Secretary, the Rev. George F. Nelson, D.D. Dr. Nelson stated the cause of the injury and expressed the Bishop's deep regret in not being able to be present.

The First Vice-President, F. F. Mackay, occupied the chair, and called upon the Rev. Dr. Shinn, President of the Boston Chapter of the Alliance, to offer prayer. At its conclusion the General Secretary, the Rev. Walter E. Bentley, read the minutes of the June meeting, closing with the resolution which called for an adjourned meeting for the election of officers to be held in October. The minutes being adopted, a committee of three was appointed by the chair to examine the credentials of delegates. This committee consisted of Messrs. Holden, Chamberlain, and Stevens. The committee retired and examined the credentials and found the same to be correct—sixteen from the New York Chapter and seven from Boston, the other chapters, Philadelphia, Portland, Maine, and York, Pa., having failed to send their delegates. The report was adopted.

A special committee of three was appointed to receive resolutions. Duff Green Maynard, the Rev. Dr. Shinn, and Harriette A. Keyser were appointed as this committee. The proposed new constitution was then discussed article by article, and changes to the effect of arranging for an Executive Committee to meet semi-annually, besides the regular monthly meeting of the National Council, received a great deal of attention, and finally at midnight the meeting was adjourned to 9 A. M. on Wednesday morning. The convention reassembled on Wednesday morning, with the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Second Vice-President, in the chair. It was moved to reconsider the entire proposed new constitution, and section by section being carefully discussed and amended in several instances, the new constitution was finally adopted as follows:

CONSTITUTION OF THE ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE OF AMERICA.

Article I. Objects.—The objects of the Actors' Church Alliance of America are to promote the best interests of the Stage and the Church by seeking to produce on the part of each a just appreciation of the opportunities and responsibilities of the other; and by uniting the Stage, the Church and the general public in a mutual effort for the betterment of all; especially in protecting the actors from being compelled to play in Sunday performances.

Art. II. Membership.—All members of the dramatic profession, members of any church and persons interested in the work of this Alliance shall be eligible for membership.

Art. III. Government.—The government of the Alliance shall be vested in a National Convention, which shall consist of delegates from the various Chapters, each Chapter to elect one delegate for every fifty of its members, and also delegates at large, to represent those members of the Alliance who are not connected with any Chapter; one delegate for every fifty unconnected members; said delegates at large to be selected from the unconnected members by the National Council and their names sent to the secretaries of the various chapters at least one month prior to the annual meeting of the national convention.

Art. IV. Officers.—There shall be a National Council consisting of the following officers elected by the National Convention—namely, a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, a Treasurer and twenty additional members, also elected by the National Convention—ten from the dramatic profession and ten from the Church, besides one delegate nominated from each Chapter affiliated with the National Convention—said National Council to execute the laws of the convention and conduct the business in the interval between the meetings of the convention. Five members shall constitute a quorum. The officers and members of this Council shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are appointed.

Art. V. Meetings.—The National Convention of the Alliance shall meet on the last Thursday in May.

Art. VI. Headquarters.—The offices of the National Council shall be located in the City of New York.

Art. VII. Alterations and Amendments.—This Constitution may be altered or amended at the annual convention, provided a notice of any proposed change be sent to the secretary of each Chapter one month before the annual convention, and three-fourths of the delegates present agree to the amendment.

The constitution being unanimously adopted, it was moved and carried that the proposed by-laws of the Alliance be recommitted to a committee of seven persons, four from the New York Chapter and three from the Boston Chapter. Those appointed were the Rev. Dr. Rushton, chairman; Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, George D. Macintyre, and Rosa Rand, representing New York, and the Rev. Dr. Shinn, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, and E. W. Chamberlin, representing Boston. This committee was empowered to create by-laws which should form a working basis for the current year.

The election of officers was next in order, and the following were elected unanimously to serve until June, 1903: President, the Right Rev. Henry C. Potter, D.D.; Vice-President, Joseph Jefferson; Second Vice-President, George D. Macintyre; General Secretary and Organizer, the Rev. Walter E. Bentley, and Treasurer, Mrs. Marie Wilson McWatters. For the National Council, representing the Church: The Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, the Rev. Thomas H. Sill, the Rev. Dr. Rushton, the Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, the Rev. H. M. Warren, the Rev. Rabbi Silverman, the Rev. Sydney H. Cox, Mrs. Donald McLean, Harriette A. Keyser, and Charles T. Catlin; representing the Stage: Harrison Grey Fiske, Milton Nobles, Verner Clarges, William F. Owen, Kate Claxton, Rosa Rand, Mrs. Sydney Rosenfeld, Madame Von Klenner, Edythe Totten, and Myra C. Brooke.

In addition to these members the Rev. J. W. Buchmaster was elected as the representative from the New York Chapter and the Rev. Dr. George W. Shinn to act in that capacity for the Boston Chapter. It was moved and carried that this principle be extended to all the other chapters that are formed or may be formed during the year. The following resolution was passed unanimously:

> Whereas, It is one of the primary objects of this Alliance to make all members welcome and at home wheresoever they may be; therefore be it
>
> Resolved, That members of any Chapter of the Actors' Church Alliance on presentation of proper credentials certifying that they are in good standing in the Alliance, shall be made visiting members (without power of vote) of the Chapter of any city they may be visiting during the period of their stay in said city.

After a vote of thanks had been extended to the vicar and the sexton of St. Chrysostom's Chapel for their courtesy, the meeting adjourned.

The national and local headquarters of the Alliance being now established at Room 31 of the Manhattan Theatre Building, all members are cordially invited to call any day between 10 A.M. and 5 P.M. On Thursday the regular teas will be resumed from 3 to 6, and members may bring their friends.

On Friday, Nov. 7, the newly elected National Council will meet for organization and transaction of business at the headquarters at 4 P.M.

THE USHER

The popular newspapers that are vigorously and justly assailing the dirt drama undoubtedly are aiming to do a good service for the American theatre. But would it not be well, as the first practical step in their movement of reform, to square their own dramatic criticisms with their editorial views? There is an incongruity in the hearty praise that is bestowed upon many of the "dirt" dramas by many of these newspapers in their dramatic columns when it is contrasted with the editorial protests that are also appearing in their columns.

A misunderstanding appears to have arisen in the press with reference to the appointment of a committee to recommend plays that are suitable for the Christian element to patronize.

Such a committee was formed by the Church Alliance some time ago, but for various reasons its work has been deferred. It was not the intention of the Alliance to establish a "censorship" of plays. Indeed, it was not the purpose to condemn any plays, however objectionable they might be. The sole purpose of the committee was to furnish information to the chaplains of the Alliance throughout the country as to plays that were free from objectionable qualities, and that were creditable to the stage.

The appointment of the committee was the result of inquiries directed to the Alliance officers in New York from members throughout the country who desired lists of plays that were clean and commendable. Indeed, in the condition of the stage under the existing régime such a bureau of information, which would enable respectable playgoers to exercise intelligent discrimination in their choice of amusements, would be of real value, not only to members of the Alliance, but in the moral and substantial phases of the matter.

It is to be hoped by all true friends of the stage in this country that the original plan of the Alliance will be put into operation. In course of time this plan, if successful, might be extended in scope so that instead of mere passive disapproval of the rot that has aroused the indignation of nearly all classes of newspapers and many elements among the public, an active campaign against it would be instituted.

The Balcony Club, to which reference was made in these columns not long ago, is in operation and it has begun to visit theatres in this city. The other night its members dined at a hotel and afterward saw The Sword of the King from the gallery. At the close of the dinner and before leaving for the theatre the members of the club listened to a brief address by Hugo Wintner, in the course of which he said:

"The woman whom the Balcony Club has decided to see to-night, Miss Crosman, is one of the few artists who have risen despite a debased syndicated theatre, and all honor to her for so doing. The pressure of those who make money their god is deadening, whether it be in the halls of the Legislature, in the broad marts of commerce, or in art. Art implies culture, spirituality, the aspiration after the beautiful, the good and the true. It may be laid down as a truth, not to be denied, that the votaries of that which is merely amusing, trivial, superficial or even debased and salacious, far outnumber in willingness to give largess for that which appeals to them, those whose taste is for the elevated and refined. Your true love of the arts is ofttimes as not limited by a slender purse; the follower after mere idle pleasure, on the contrary, willingly will and can indulge himself. And in this do we find the cause of the persistency with which the controlling forces of our present day theatredom play into the hands and pander to the tastes of the many, as against the artistic few. It brings money to their coffers. Art for art's sake, with them, is a played out and frayed out dictum; money for money's sake seems to be the rule of conduct, to the end that taste and letters, truth and refinement, have largely lost their part in the dramatic life of to-day. And when women artists succeed, despite the machinations and enmity of those banded together to foist upon the public their own wares exclusively and to shut out independent players, all honor and all encouragement should be theirs.

The Balcony Club, although established only for the entertainment and social recreation of its members, is likely to prove a force in this city in supporting worthy plays and in erecting better artistic standards. In time its work may become as valuable here as that of the Playgoers' Club in London.

A gentleman in Kansas City who noticed the reference to St. Louis Syndicate bookings in this column recently, writes:

"I can contribute something to this subject. Of Kansas City's six theatres there is but one—the Willis Wood—that plays strictly high-class attractions, and a glance over the list of its bookings so far this season is interesting and suggestive.

"The attractions played at the Willis Wood have been Amelia Bingham, The Strollers, J. H. Stoddard, The Sultan of Sulu, Under Two Flags, Corianton (which had a chorus and ballet), The Storks, The Wizard of Oz, The Bostonians, and Foxy Quiller. This is the complete list to date, with De Wolf Hopper and The Liberty Belles to follow in the order named.

"It will be seen that of the twelve attractions so far presented this season at the Willis Wood Theatre nine have been musical pieces, and seven of these have followed one another in succession. They say 'Variety is the spice of life.' We would be grateful for a little of the 'spice.'"

What is true of St. Louis and Kansas City is true also of other cities. I understand that the Davidson Theatre in Milwaukee has had six musical plays virtually in succession this season. And yet the Syndicate proudly claims that it has reduced the business of booking to a system, and that it protects attractions from clashing one with another!

Enlightenment as to responsibility for reprehensible conditions in the American theatrical world continues to be had through the medium of influential out-of-town newspapers. The evening Press of St. Joseph, Mo., published an editorial recently, which lays the blame where it belongs. The article in question merits republication, and it is here given in full:

One of the remarkable developments of the American theatre is that the local manager or lessee is no longer responsible for the attractions he offers.

The old-fashioned notion of a theatre manager was that he was the purveyor of amusements; and it was expected of him then that he taste first in the kitchen what he offered in the dining-room. He went wherever he wished to get the amusements that he believed would please his people. He was therefore responsible for everything that his billboards advertised; and the people, on the other hand, were justified in visiting their feelings of gratitude or resentment, as the case might be, upon him personally.

Those happy days went out when the Theatrical Syndicate came in. Now almost the entire theatrical business of the country is directed from the offices of Klaw and Erlanger on Broadway, New York. They are the booking agents of the "Syndicate"; and the "Syndicate" controls nearly all the best theatres in the principal cities of the country.

The "Syndicate" is doing a great deal of harm, just as any organization having a substantial monopoly is sure to do. Producing managers are compelled to pay it for houses to play in; and house managers must pay for attractions to play. It can collect tribute from both sides because neither dares object under penalty of being put out of business.

While these aspects of the situation are chiefly of interest to theatrical managers, there are ways in which it affects the theatregoer very intimately. The local manager is left no choice as to what shall play in his house. He must take what is sent him by a lot of irresponsible clerks in Klaw and Erlanger's New York office. Naturally they neither know nor care what the merits of the many hundred attractions they have to book are. Nor can they know what the local conditions are.

These are some of the things that make the task of a theatrical manager extremely difficult. It is just as well to be familiar with them so as to be able to place the blame where it belongs when bad attractions come to town. Of course, it will not do the least bit of good to blame the Theatrical Syndicate; words haven't the least effect upon it.

MRS. FISKE'S TRIUMPH.

Mrs. Fiske has won the greatest note of her career in Paul Heyse's historical and poetic drama, Mary of Magdala, which was produced on Thursday, Oct. 23, at the Pabst Theatre, Milwaukee, and is now fulfilling an engagement of three weeks at the Grand Opera House, Chicago. In Milwaukee Mrs. Fiske and her company appeared before audiences among the largest and most distinguished ever gathered at a theatre in that city, and the same may be said of her Chicago engagement, which promises to be one of the most remarkable in point of patronage in the dramatic history of that city, while it has proved already to be the most remarkable in the breadth of interest that it has touched. In fact, the production has created in Chicago the most profound dramatic sensation within memory.

The newspapers have devoted pages to reviews and comments on Mary of Magdala, the terms and measure of praise for the play, the production, the acting of Mrs. Fiske, who is admitted to have touched her highest point of achievement, and the work of her company, being phenomenal. One of the most significant things about the event is the fact that no play in many years has so deeply stirred the higher circles of thought in connection with the drama.

In addition to an almost unprecedented indorsement by the press, Mary of Magdala has inspired the publicly-expressed approval of representatives of churches of various denominations, including the most prominent Jewish rabbi in Chicago, Catholic priests, and the leaders of ethical culture and other bodies of exceptional intelligence; and, moreover, it has proved to be a drama with a powerful general appeal.

Although Mary of Magdala enforces the most serious and earnest attention, dealing as it does with what an eminent German critic has called "a tragedy that touches the interest of the whole world," moving one that witnesses it in such a way that a quiet intensity of appreciation and emotion seems more fitting than the usual demonstrations in the theatre, Mrs. Fiske on the opening night in Chicago received twenty-five curtain calls, twelve of which marked the close of the fourth act.

THEATRE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The Morgan Opera House at Sharon, Pa., was completely gutted by fire on last Thursday night, Oct. 30. The loss sustained approximates $130,000, on which there was $25,000 insurance. The proprietors announce that they will rebuild the opera house at once.

AMATEUR NOTES.

The members of the Madison Square Synagogue will give a musical production at Sherry's on Dec. 4 entitled At the Sign of the Clock. The proceeds are to go to Sisterhood of the Temple.

The old McCullough Dramatic Club, of St. Louis, has been reorganized under the name of the Booth-Mansfield Dramatic Club. Rostand's Les Romantiques and the third act of Hamlet have been selected as the opening bill.

THE ARONSON-FROHMAN SUIT.

The suit brought by Rudolph Aronson against Daniel Frohman, to recover damages in the matter of the concert tour of Jan Kubelik, was tried in the Tenth Municipal District Court before Judge Murray last week. The court decided against Mr. Aronson and gave judgment to Mr. Frohman for $500. This was, however, merely a test case. The case has been appealed and will be tried in the Supreme Court.

The story of the case is an intricate and interesting one. Mr. Aronson, who makes frequent visits to Europe, heard of Kubelik in Hungary in 1899. He learned that Kubelik was not of age and was under the management of Norbert Gotthardt Dunkl, who is a wealthy man, a disciple of art for art's sake, and who is the largest dealer in music in Budapest. Owing to Kubelik's minority he was under Dunkl's management by the terms of a legal form similar to apprenticeship. According to the laws of Hungary he will not come of age until he reaches twenty-four.

Mr. Aronson has known Mr. Dunkl for many years. He suggested long ago to Mr. Dunkl that an American tour of the young violinist might be profitable, and procured an option for Kubelik's appearance in America. Mr. Aronson and Mr. Dunkl met again in London in June, 1901, and practically brought the negotiations between themselves to a head. Mr. Dunkl agreed to bring Kubelik to America if Mr. Aronson would deposit with him the sum of $10,000 as guarantee. Mr. Aronson was unable at the time to make so large an advance, and, hearing that Mr. Frohman was in London, he called upon him to invite him to go into partnership in the venture.

"Would you like to go into a musical enterprise with me?" said Mr. Aronson to Mr. Frohman.

"What is it?" asked Mr. Frohman.

"Kubelik!" said Mr. Aronson.

Thereupon Mr. Frohman inquired if Kubelik was a baritone, a harpist, a pianist or a violinist. Mr. Aronson explained that Kubelik played the violin, and that he was the biggest musical "find" in Europe. He told Mr. Frohman of the necessary $10,000 guarantee and asked him to advance the money. Mr. Frohman agreed. A contract was drawn, by the terms of which they were to be equal partners, and Mr. Aronson was to supervise the tour. At the same time, it is claimed, an agreement was entered into between Mr. Dunkl, on the one side, and Mr. Aronson and Mr. Frohman on the other, that Kubelik should give forty concerts in America, beginning in November, 1901, Kubelik to receive fifty per cent. of the earnings and Mr. Aronson and Mr. Frohman the remainder. A clause was inserted that Mr. Dunkl should have until July 15 to get Kubelik's consent and thereby complete the contract. That contract was never consummated.

While this matter was in abeyance, Hugo Gorlitz learned of the situation and went directly to Kubelik himself and made a contract with him to appear in America, it is alleged. Kubelik also demanded a deposit of $10,000. Mr. Gorlitz went to Mr. Frohman as Mr. Aronson had done, and secured from him another $10,000, and a new contract was made. These negotiations were kept secret from Mr. Aronson, it is claimed. Mr. Frohman, however, is understood to have secured the return of the $10,000 that he had advanced to Mr. Dunkl.

Mr. Aronson returned to America late in July to make preparations for the tour, which was to open on Oct. 2. He arrived here on Aug. 16, and gave some information to the newspapers about Kubelik's season, believing the arrangement with Mr. Frohman was still in force. On the following morning he was informed that Mr. Frohman had signed a contract with Mr. Gorlitz and Kubelik on July 21, in which he was left out of the matter entirely. On the same day he received a letter from Mr. Frohman, which had followed him to several places in Europe and at last to America. This letter was dated London, July 20. In it Mr. Frohman stated.

> Inasmuch as I am informed that the money has been sent (meaning the $10,000 returned by Dunkl), I conclude, as there are so many complications, uncertainties, and such a number of representatives of Kubelik, who, I understand is not even in Hungary legally of age, I propose to withdraw. I should never have gone into the matter had I foreseen all these difficulties.

Upon learning that he had been dropped from the venture in which he had been interested for two years, and had practically made the arrangements that led up to the tour, Mr. Aronson immediately instituted suit against Mr. Frohman for two weeks' advance expenses, it having been stipulated in his contract with Mr. Frohman that he was to have $100 per week for that purpose. This case was merely instituted to test the legality of Mr. Aronson's claim. The defense was that the original contract had become void, and also that Mr. Frohman had advanced $900 for expenses which had never been returned to him.

In the trial the testimony of Mr. Dunkl, which was taken in Budapest before Frank Dyer Chester, United States Consul, was enlightening and interesting. Mr. Dunkl testified that a week after Kubelik returned to Prague from London Mr. Gorlitz arrived, on Frohman's order, to make contracts for Frohman direct. Mr. Dunkl concluded his deposition by saying, "I regret that I know nothing which I can say in Daniel Frohman's favor."

It appears from the evidence that Mr. Frohman appropriated the plan that Mr. Aronson had originated and developed, and while keeping Mr. Aronson in the belief that he was acting in good faith, contrived to make another contract, through the agency of Mr. Gorlitz, that was more to his pecuniary advantage. The contract between Mr. Aronson and Mr. Frohman cannot, however, be laid aside so easily, and Mr. Aronson purposes to fight for his share in the profits of the tour, which amounted to more than $100,000.

Mr. Aronson has secured for an American tour next season the young Bohemian violinist, Jaroslav Kocian, who is said by many critics to be a greater artist than Kubelik. With his lawsuit—which he intends to press vigorously to the end—and his preparations for the Kocian tour Mr. Aronson will have a busy and an exciting year.

CASTLE IN THE AIR PRODUCED.

A new comic opera in three acts, book by Harlan E. Read, music by Walter Howe Jones, entitled, Castle In the Air, was produced at Jacksonville, Ill., Oct. 30, before a large and enthusiastic audience.

CUES.

Percy Plunkett, who is with Tracy, the Outlaw, met with a peculiar accident last week. While at a hotel at Milford, Mass., Mr. Plunkett tried to open one of the windows in his room. He stood on a chair in doing so, as the window was jammed. The upper window suddenly came down catching his hand. It took about half an hour for a carpenter to cut away the window and thus release Mr. Plunkett. Fortunately no bones were broken, although Mr. Plunkett now plays with a lame hand.

Elbert Hubbard will give a lecture at the Manhattan Theatre on Sunday night, Nov. 16, on "The Roycroft Ideals."

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Owen Davis (Elizabeth Breyer), in Brooklyn, on Oct. 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pemberton (Louise Dunbar) have resigned from The Heart of Chicago, closing at Manchester, N. H., on Nov. 8.

Wallace Worsley has been loaned to Walter D. Yager to play Lieutenant Karel in Hoch the Consul, and will appear in that character in Philadelphia on Nov. 10.

The condition of Al. G. Field, who is lying ill at Mobile, Ala., is slightly improved, though he is still unable to leave the city.

The following members of the company playing A Millionaire Tramp have recently been initiated in the order of Eagles: Gus Mortimer, Archie Lochridge, Fred Rowley, W. J. Baxter, A. T. Frisbey, and F. W. Briggs. Mr. Briggs was initiated by the Eagles of El Reno, O. T., at a banquet given to the entire company in celebration of the event.

PERSONAL

CORTELYOU.—Alida Cortelyou returns to New York this week as leading woman with William Gillette. She apeared here originally as Berenis, in the first production of The Sign of the Cross, at the Knickerbocker Theatre, and it is to that theatre that she now returns. Since the first season of The Sign of the Cross in this country, Miss Cortelyou has been continuously successful in England. She is a Brooklyn girl and a niece of the private secretary to President Roosevelt.

CROSMAN.—Henrietta Crosman's popularity with women has been strikingly manifested at Wallack's. At two successive Saturday matinees of The Sword of the King the big audiences of women have insisted upon a speech from Miss Crosman. Speech-making from the stage on special occasions, such as first-nights, is not uncommon, but at ordinary performances it is extraordinary. It shows the great esteem in which Miss Crosman is held by her own sex.

SOTHERN.—E. H. Sothern will be seen again as Hamlet at the Garden Theatre in December. Cecelia Loftus will rejoin Mr. Sothern's company to play Ophelia and Sydney C. Mather will impersonate Laertes.

BLOODGOOD.—Clara Bloodgood is going to star soon in Clyde Fitch's new play, The Girl with the Green Eyes. Mrs. Bloodgood probably will have to make-up her eyes to enact the title-role, which must have been suggested by James Richmond Glenroy, known to fame in vaudeville as "the man with the green gloves."

MANTELL.—Robert Mantell did not undergo a surgical operation at Toledo last week, as has been reported. The X-ray apparatus showed that he had simply an inflamed shoulder. He has been able, therefore, to continue uninterruptedly with his work.

FITCH.—Clyde Fitch, on his way to a rehearsal of The Stubbornness of Geraldine, at the Garrick Theatre, on Oct. 28, stepped out of a cab in the wrong way and sprained an ankle. He fainted and a physician was summoned to revive him, but he announced that he would be present at the opening performance of the play in New Haven on Friday.

GROSSMITH.—Weedon Grossmith attended the Democratic rally in Madison Square on Oct. 28 and got hit by a stray ball from a roman candle that landed under his collar. It burned him so severely that he fainted between acts at the Princess Theatre later in the evening.

ROYLE.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Milton Royle (Selena Fetter), who had intended to produce Mr. Royle's new comedy, My Wife's Husbands, early this season in New York, have decided instead to revive Mr. Royle's successful comedy, Friends, many out-of-town managers having made a request for this play.

SALVINI.—Tomasso Salvini, now living in retirement at Florence, Italy, has lost a lot of priceless art treasures, wreaths, medals and other souvenirs of his stage career, which have been stolen from his villa.

JEFFERSON.—Joseph Jefferson has been asked, at the suggestion of Admiral George Dewey, president of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Association, to act as the association's vice-president for the State of Florida. The veteran comedian has been always an ardent admirer of the man that wrote the Declaration of Independence.

CONOR.—Harry Conor has been confined to his rooms at the Catholic Club in this city, suffering with an attack of pneumonia. But he expects to be about again in a few days.

HARVEY.—Martin Harvey was the guest of honor at a luncheon given on Wednesday by former Park Commissioner Elijah R. Kennedy, now president of the Shore Road Commission.

MAY.—Olive May, lately returned from London, will appear as Georgianna Travers, the American girl, in Louis Mann's comedy, Hoch the Consul, in Philadelphia on Nov. 10. While abroad Miss May appeared as Bonita in Arizona, and was honored with a special reception by the King.

CAMPBELL.—Owing to a sudden illness of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, no performances of The Joy of Living were given at the Garden Theatre on Thursday and Friday nights nor on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Campbell contracted a very severe cold during a rehearsal of Magda early in the week and was scarcely able to get through the performance on Wednesday evening.

Old Heidelberg, a five-act comedy by Wilhelm Meyer-Förster, had its first production in America at the Irving Place last Tuesday night. In Germany and Austria its success was instantaneous, and it would seem from its record of several hundred performances that there must be some substantial reason for this success. The reason may be found in the second and third acts, but particularly in the second, of the play. These are amusing enough to condone what precedes them and what follows. Played as they were last Tuesday night they almost disarm criticism, but it is a question whether, if they had been in less able hands, they would have met with such enthusiasm on the part of the audience as they did. What gives the second act its charm is, aside from a single episode between the hero and heroine, the accurate reproduction of the student atmosphere at a great university. To university men it will appeal because it recalls like scenes in which they once were actors; to those who have never been within university walls its appeal lies in the charm of the careless, buoyant, whole-hearted youth with which it is redolent. The lines are simple and elementally human, as the characters in whose mouth they are put are supposed to be. But these lines, without Herr Conried's masterly stage direction, would not have gone very far toward achieving what was one of the most perfect bits of stage realism seen here in many a day. Assisting in the student scenes were a number of members of the Deutscher Verein at Columbia University, who entered heart and soul into the spirit of their parts. The stage setting for this act, in the garden of Ritter's Inn, on the banks of the Neckar, with Old Heidelberg on the opposite side rising steeply to the castle, was rarely beautiful.

The play may be aptly described as a Volksstück, and like all productions of that character its plot is of the simplest. It lacks originality, but it has elements that appeal deeply to the popular fancy. The story of royalty loving and being loved by a commoner and the pathetic renunciation one of the other is old as the hills, but no one ever tires of it. Aside from the meagreness of the plot the action is slow—always excepting the aforesaid second and third acts—especially in the first act, which drags badly.

The curtain rises on the castle of the Prince of Sachsen-Karlsburg, where preparations are making to send the Prince's nephew and heir, Karl Heinrich, a boy of twenty, to the University of Heidelberg. He is to be accompanied by his valet, Lutz, and his tutor of eight years' standing, Dr. Jüttner. Jüttner, who is a Heidelberg man, is overjoyed at the opportunity to return to the jolly life of the students, but his pleasure is extinguished by orders which Prime Minister von Haugk brings to him from their royal master. The Crown Prince is to lead the soberest of lives, in close communion with his books. The doctor declines to go on these terms, but his pupil, whom he loves, wheedles him into consenting to go. The trio take up their residence at the inn of Rüder, a favorite resort of the students, perhaps because of the landlord's willingness to oblige, perhaps because of his pretty daughter Käthie. The Prince has had no close association with man, woman or child, save his tutor, and naturally he is cold and reserved. Käthie with her coquetry and graces easily breaks down his reserve, and the spark of love sets both hearts on fire. Count von Asterberg, upon whom his fellow-students look as their leader, takes Karl Heinrich in charge and soon moulds him into shape as a member of the student body. For four months Karl leads a life of unalloyed pleasure. The student frolics, Käthie's love, make him feel perfectly satisfied with his new life. Suddenly, like a thunderbolt from a clear sky, von Haugk appears to call him back to the old life. The old Prince is ill, and it is advisable, for state reasons, that his successor be close at hand in the event of his death. Karl refuses to go, but the old minister makes it clear to him which way his duty lies. The young man bids Käthie good-bye. He tells her that he will be back in a few days and then they will be happy again. Two years are to elapse before he sees Heidelberg and Käthie again. His uncle dies, and as his successor young Karl is too much engrossed with cares of state to return to the old university city, although he often thinks of it. The appearance of Kellermann, the general factotum of the band of which Karl was once a member, to claim the position of master of the Prince's wine cellar, promised him in the happy days two years before, makes the Prince resolve to go back to Heidelberg once more, for a final visit. He meets his fellow comrades at a farewell dinner in Rüder's garden, but the meeting is formal, without the warmth and good fellowship which once characterized their relations. Käthie alone is the same. The two confess their love for each other, and they part forever, he to return to his principality, where he is soon to marry a neighboring Princess, she to go to Vienna to marry a man to whom she has been engaged for years.

The honors of the evening went to Hedwig von Ostermann, whose Käthie was an admirable piece of work. The character is a welcome relief from the ladies of the psychological drama. Its purity and girlish charm, without a touch of sophistication, were depicted with entire naturalness. The scene in the second act between Käthie and the Prince was exquisitely done. The deeper sentiment of the parting scene in the last act Miss von Ostermann played with as thorough comprehension. John Feistel was a satisfactory Karl Heinrich. He was simple and boyish. The changes from the reserved boy of the first act to the joy-loving student of the second, and again to the dignified ruler of the last two acts, were accurately shown. Max Haenseler's Dr. Jüttner was a lovable character. It lies well within his abilities, and he brought out everything there was in it. Otto Reimann as Count von Asterberg, the soul of the student revels, could not have been improved upon. Other students were played acceptably by Richard Schlaghamer, Jacques Horwitz, and Vladimir Schamberg. Capital bits of character work were done by Willy Frey as Rüder, by Julius Ascher as Kellermann, and by Georgine Neuendorff as Madame Doerffel.

Broadway—The Silver Slipper.

The Silver Slipper, presented for the first time in New York at the Broadway Theatre last Monday night, won instant favor with as large and brilliant an audience as has assembled in any theatre in town this season. Long before the curtain rose every seat was occupied. The overture was applauded, and nearly every important musical number through the performance was demanded a second time. On account of the many encores the performance lasted until after midnight, but the enthusiasm of the onlookers continued to the final curtain.

The new venture comedy is by the authors of Florodora, Owen Hall being the librettist and Leslie Stuart the composer. The lyrics are credited to W. H. Risque, and the entire book had been overhauled and rearranged for American production by Clay M. Greene. Each of these gentlemen acquitted himself well. The stage-manager, the scenic artists and the costumers also triumphed. As a spectacle The Silver Slipper is as gorgeous and beautiful a thing as the most thoroughly satiated theatregoer might wish for. Indeed, the eye grows tired with the succession of brilliant stage pictures. The four stage settings shown are no less handsome than the costumes—which is to say that they might scarcely be surpassed.

The story of the play, though slender, is strong enough to support the array of songs, choruses and dances that are introduced. It concerns chiefly the misadventures of a company of young women from the planet Venus, who, because one of their number dropped her slipper to the earth, are condemned to come to earth and remain until the lost article is found. The slipper falls in the garden of Sir Victor Shallamar, an old English astronomer, and it is shortly followed by the delegation from Venus. These visitors quickly upset the love affairs of all the mortals in the play. The slipper is found by Wrenne, a picturesque young lady who is in love with Sir Victor's nephew. Her father, Henny Bismark Heuscha, a showman and faiz, steals the slipper from Wrenne, and by using the power with which it invests him he contrives to secure the Venus visitors as attractions at a side show that he establishes at the Neuilly Fair, in France. Of course, the slipper is finally returned to its owner, the troublesome beauties go back to Venus, and the tangled love affairs are straightened out. The scenes are the gardens of Sir Victor, the Hall of Justice on the planet Venus, the Neuilly Fair, and the interior of the Art Club in Paris.

Of the twenty-five musical numbers in the piece nearly all are pleasing, and many are exceptionally attractive. The music in its entirety is greatly superior to Florodora, and with the orchestra of forty-two men, under the direction of Arthur Weld, and a stage full of well trained singers, its beauties were admirably presented to the audience. Among the particularly pleasing numbers were "Fun on a Motor," "Two Eyes of Blue," "Glimpses," "The Baby with the Dimple and the Smile," "Four-and-Twenty Little Men," and "Clam." A double sextette was inevitable. It was almost exactly like the Florodora sextette, except that the gowns worn by the women were far more costly, and it proved to be one of the few tiresome numbers in the piece. Almost immediately following it came a double sextette dance so full of gayety, grace, spirit and novelty that the audience fairly shouted with delight. The six girls, dressed in brilliant red, executed many and various sprightly figures with six men dressed as waiters. The dance was splendidly done and made one of the particular hits of the performance.

Sam Bernard, in the role of Henry Bismark Heuscha, was an excellent leader of the gayety. The role had been altered to fit him, and in it his peculiar humor was exhibited at its best. Cyril Scott, as Berkeley Shallamar, again acted and sang with the gentlemanly bearing and manner that he displayed in Florodora, and his songs were received with great favor by the audience. Knits Edwards played the old astronomer, Sir Victor, in delightful comedy fashion. Mackenzie Gordon, as Donald Gregor, was somewhat stilted in his acting, but made up for his dramatic shortcomings by his splendid vocal accomplishments.

Edna Wallace Hopper is to be credited with the best characterization, in the role of Wrenne, that she has yet given in New York. She sang and acted in her usual sprightly and engaging fashion, and beyond that she entered into the real spirit of her role in a manner that she has never chosen to attempt before. Helen Royton was a charming Stella, the girl from Venus, and her songs—particularly "Glimpses"—were much applauded. Mai de Villiers, in the role of Queen of Venus, displayed a well trained voice, a fine stage presence and an agreeable manner. Josie Sadler made a decided hit in the role of Belle Jimper, a cockney maid servant, who is in love with Heuscha, the showman.

Every one of the lesser members of the cast was equal to his or her part, and the best of choristers made a brave and beautiful display. The stage-management throughout was excellent and, as has been said, the costuming was superb.

Fourteenth Street—Old Limerick Town.

Chauncey Olcott made his New York reappearance last week in a new comedy-drama from the pen of his manager, Augustus Pitou, embellished with four new songs by Mr. Olcott himself.

The plot revolves around Neil O'Brien, a young Irishman of the "better class," whose father, at his death, had left him a fortune and a large lace factory which was doing a prosperous business. The youth had devoted his time to riding after the hounds, playing cards for high stakes and enjoying himself generally. At the opening of the play he finds himself facing pecuniary ruin on account of his extravagances. At the time he makes this discovery he falls in love with Noreen Burke, the daughter of a wealthy neighbor.

He makes up his mind to reform and win the girl of his heart. He has as a rival Captain Boswell, of the British Army, but the Captain is such a disagreeable sort of person that no doubt is left in the minds of the audience as to which man Noreen will choose as a husband. Boswell, with the assistance of Captain Leffingham and Count De Chalveres, a French card sharp and adventurer, tries to advance his suit by involving Thomas Burke, Noreen's brother, in some dishonorable transactions, including the raising of a check for £25, which has been lent to him by O'Brien. Later they attempt a robbery and try to get away with the funds of a society started by O'Brien for the relief of the needy people of Limerick. Of course all their attempts are foiled by the quick wit of O'Brien, who covers up Thomas's disgrace and wins the hand of Noreen with flying colors. His principal ally in exposing the villains is a Hindoo servant who is all eyes and manages to be right on the spot when there is any crooked work going on.

There is little to be said in praise of the latest vehicle turned out by Mr. Pitou for his star. The plot is so simple that the smallest boy in the gallery can see the outcome before the first act is over. There is no Irish atmosphere, and the scenes and incidents would be just as appropriate if the action were supposed to take place in New York, London or Stockholm. The costumes are very picturesque, as the period of the play is 1835-36, but there is not a scintilla of Irish sentiment, such as would bring back memories of the "Ould Dart" to any one, even if he came from Limerick.

In an Irish play one expects to hear a touch of the brogue from all the characters who are of Irish birth. It is a strange thing, but none the less true, that the only member of the cast whose accent was anything like the real thing was Matt B. Snyder, whose name is distinctly Teutonic. Mr. Olcott made a fair attempt at the brogue, but it was evidently an effort for him. As for the others, they were hopeless. If there is one letter in the alphabet that is rolled over the Irish tongue with more unction than the others, it is the letter "r." This fact was ignored by nearly every player, and some of them pronounced words like "girl" and "persevere" as though they were spelled "goil" and "poyseveah." This is unpardonable, for whatever dialect they use in Ireland at the present day, surely as far back as 1835 the people of Limerick had never heard of the absurd "New York" pronunciation, which for several years has been obsolete, and is now being drummed out of the pupils in the public schools of this city.

Mr. Olcott succeeded as well as ever in pleasing his admirers, though his acting is lacking in the magnetism that should be inseparable from the proper rendition of an Irish part. His songs were all vociferously encored, though he had a hard time with the orchestra on the opening night. "Noreen Mavourneen" is the catchiest of the songs introduced. "Every Little Dog Must Have His Day," sung to the children, is a pretty number, and "The Voice of the Violet" is a dainty conceit. "The Limerick Girls" is not of much account. Three or four more songs would help the play wonderfully, as the star is at his best when he is singing.

Miriam Nesbitt, the new leading woman of the company, made a very favorable impression. She has youth, enthusiasm and beauty of a rare type in her favor, and the audience took to her with great warmth. Her part is not one that gives her much scope, but she spoke her lines well and bore herself with unending grace and charm. Matt B. Snyder, mentioned above, was uncommonly good and played Mr. Burke with much dignity and excellent humor. Bertram Godfrey was an acceptable villain of the polite type, and Emile La Croix's French accent was faultless. Edwin B. Tilton, as Leffingham, the Hindoo, had all the "fat" that was left after Mr. Olcott had been supplied, and he scored a hit. Tuttle Carr and Blanche Alexander are a pair of very "cute" children. Alice Taylor, Elizabeth Washburne, Blanche Sweet, Harry Mestayer, Rose Snyder, Percy Jennings, Edmund Hogan and William H. Gough were also in the cast. The scenery and accessories were pretty and picturesque.

At the end of the play Mr. Olcott was called upon for a speech, but he left the task to Mr. Pitou, who responded with alacrity and addressed the audience for several minutes on the subject of Mr. Olcott's success in other cities.

A new five-act melodrama, Old Sleuth, written by Hal Reid and based upon Charles Garvice's well-known series of detective stories, was produced for the first time here at the New Star Theatre last week, Hal Stephens being featured in the title-role.

The play is more than a commonly crude specimen of its class, but an immense audience on the opening night greeted it with unbounded enthusiasm, which involved cheers and yells as well as clapping of hands and stamping of feet. Probably in no existing play has a heroine been rescued from dire perils so often as occurs to Rene Ruthendale in Old Sleuth. She is persistently and relentlessly in trouble and danger. It were vain to try to tell of the countless scrapes from which she is saved only by the timely interposition of Old Sleuth, the detective. The late Sherlock Holmes never saw the day when he could claim anything like the record of this amazing professional rescuer. The audience undertook to keep count of his rescues and disguises, but they lost track long before the second act was over. The sensational episodes are topped by scenes showing a burning bridge at Niagara Falls and a locomotive excitement in a railway tunnel. These were worked acceptably, though the effects were somewhat marred by the crudity of the scenery.

Hal Stephens gave a capital performance in the variegated role of the redoubtable Old Sleuth and played under peculiar difficulties, having injured a leg by a fall at Philadelphia a week earlier, which compelled him to use crutches when off the stage. But he got away most successfully with all the lightning changes and numberless disguises and installed himself promptly as an unusual hero. Neil Florence was a somewhat gentle villain, and Benjamin Gun, as his partner in crime, didn't seem to be nearly as evil as his lines alleged that he was. Master Martin contributed a first rate sketch of a comic negro, Teresa Toub was good as the persecuted and much-rescued heroine, and Rose Tiffany scored emphatically as a female detective. The others did well enough with what they had to do.

American—The Judgment of King Solomon.

The Judgment of King Solomon, produced by the American Theatre stock company last week, was a surprise in many respects. Considering the fact that the drama was produced with only one week of rehearsal, the result was remarkable. Many of the scenic effects were striking, and the stage management was good. The play itself was a disappointment. It was described as a "biblical" play, in that the plot is founded upon a story of King Solomon given in the Bible. As a matter of fact only a small portion of the plot has anything to do with the biblical story referred to. It tells of two sisters of the tribe of Benjamin, who are decoyed by King Solomon's officers into his palace and are there ruined. Naamah, the heroine of the play, is brought back to her tent, but is later driven from the tribe because of her fall. Her lover, Mazael, follows her. Manasses, a general and noble of Solomon's court and army, is the villain of the play. King Solomon has a dream that his temple is destroyed by God, because of his wrath for the life he has been leading. The dream is scenically pictured upon the stage, showing the destruction of the temple. After awakening from the dream the king declares that he will alter his life, and learning that he has ruined a girl, Naamah, he demands that Manasses go forth and find her and her child, promising to make her his queen. Manasses plots to bring Rebecca, the sister of Naamah, as the wronged woman. He finds Rebecca in a hut with Naamah outside of the walls of Jerusalem, and at nightfall kills Rebecca's child, mistaking it for Naamah's. To avert the results of his mistake, he takes Naamah's child to the palace with Rebecca. Naamah, seeking justice, comes to the palace and demands her child. Mazael is killed trying to force his way into the palace. It is here that the biblical story is interwoven with the plot. King Solomon, not knowing which woman to believe, orders the child to be brought to him, and he then commands Manasses to strike the babe with his sword. Naamah drops on her knees and declares the child to be Rebecca's, begging the king to spare its life. Solomon at once takes Naamah as his wife and orders the execution of Manasses and Rebecca.

Much of the play borders on the vulgar, and the sensationalism of many of the scenes weakens the story. There is much to commend, however, authough it is far from being a powerful drama.

Maurice Freeman played King Solomon capably, although the grandeur of the character was hardly brought out, owing partially to the deficiencies of the play. Jessaline Rodgers made the most of the part of Naamah, bringing out the extreme mournfulness of the fallen woman's spirit. Robert Cummings was good as the hero-lover, Mazael. Charles Halleck was sufficiently villainous as Manasses. Frank E. Jamieson gave a dignified portrayal of Azarius, the father of the tribe of Benjamin. Thomas Reynolds infused low comedy into the only amusing character of the play. Lillian Bayer played Rebecca with her usual aptitude. The other parts were in the main capably played, and the large number of extras, including the children, showed the results of much drilling. The incidental music by Charles F. Dittmar and Joseph A. Paaterneck was mainly incongruous, although some of it was good.

On Monday evening the company appeared in Man's Enemy before the usual large and enthusiastic audience. The performance will be reviewed in THE MIRROR next week.

At Other Playhouses.

Owing to the fact that this issue of THE MIRROR has been sent to press earlier than is usual because of the legal holiday, Election Day, on Tuesday, notices of the week's new productions are deferred until the next number. The announcements at the various theatres include the following attractions:

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Le Voyage en Suisse is scheduled to entertain the West Siders for the week.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—Robert Edeson in Soldiers of Fortune will spend the week uptown.

METROPOLIS.—Lovers' Lane will be seen for the first time in the annexed district.

MARIE DRESSLER.

Marie Dressler was seriously ill with typhoid fever last week at her rooms in the Luella apartment house, this city, and her condition was so dangerous on Tuesday evening that her physician feared that she might not survive the night. Happily, however, she rallied rapidly and on Saturday it was said that she might be able to out of doors again this week.

THE FUNERAL OF ALFRED AYRES.

On last Tuesday afternoon, at Bailey's undertaking rooms in West Forty-second Street, brief and simple funeral ceremonies were held over the remains of Alfred Ayres, the critic and scholar, who died at Bellevue Hospital on Oct. 26. According to his wish there was no religious service. The speakers and the twenty-five or thirty other persons present were all close friends of Mr. Ayres, and their silent grief paid a grander tribute to the dead than could have been evidenced by any stately ceremonies. The casket was decked with wreaths and floral emblems that bespoke remembrance in the hearts of other friends who could not be present at the funeral.

After the hymn, "Abide With Me," had been sung by Mrs. Leypoldt, the place at the head of the bier was taken by A. Growoll, managing editor of The Publishers' Weekly, and a friend of Mr. Ayres of thirty years standing. Mr. Growoll told briefly Mr. Ayres' history, showing the breadth of his study and the constancy of his endeavor in his chosen lines of work. Colonel T. Allston Brown then delivered an address, in which he gave, in sympathetic fashion, an intimate view of Mr. Ayres from the standpoint of one connected with the stage. Rossiter Johnson, author and editor, was the last speaker. In his eulogy, which was a masterpiece of quiet oratory, he said: "A man who, amid the temptations and buffetings of this sorry world, succeeds in living a clean and honest life is worthy of our esteem. Such was the life of Alfred Ayres. And if a man, beyond that, reaches out and up into great fields of scholarly endeavor and accomplishes works that aid his fellow men he is worthy of our highest admiration. Mr. Ayres did these things. It seems to me that we, his friends, may be comforted somewhat by the thought that, although he who was our friend lies dead, the better part of him, the product of his brain, still lives and continues to benefit mankind."

At the conclusion of the ceremony the remains were taken to Woodlawn Cemetery and there interred in the plot of Mrs. A. H. Leypoldt, who, with her late husband, Mr. Ayres accounted his earliest friends in New York. Mrs. Leypoldt and Eliza Warren, who attended Mr. Ayres most devotedly during his last illness, accompanied the body to the cemetery.

JEROME, A POOR MAN.

The tour of Walter E. Perkins in the dramatisation of Mary E. Wilkins' story, "Jerome, a Poor Man," has been from the opening night most successful, it is said. The press in the New England cities where this attraction has appeared are unusually commendatory in their criticisms of play, company and production. The stage version was made by Carroll Fleming. "Time for this attraction has already been offered the production in Boston and other leading cities of the country," says Manager Truss, "and it will reach New York early in the year. The cast shows a capable company, and the scenic equipment is all special. The destruction of the saw mill in the third act is particularly well devised. The cast:

Jerome Edwards	Walter E. Perkins
Simon Bassett	George Ober
Colonel Lamson	Joseph Allen
Rben Merritt	Frank J. McIntyre
Eliphalet Means	Burr Caruth
Dr. Seth Prescott	David Miles
Lawrence Prescott	Everett Butterfield
Admiram Judd	Raymond Chase
Lish Robinson	William C. Welp
Hiram Ames	George C. Taylor
Lucina Merritt	Mabel Strickland
Elmira Edwards	Mabel Van Buren
Belinda	Helen Lee
Paulina Maria	George Elliott
Abigail Merritt	Marie Dudley Davis

NEW FITCH PLAY PRODUCED.

The Stubbornness of Geraldine, the latest play from the pen of Clyde Fitch, was acted for the first time last Friday night at the Hyperion Theatre, New Haven, Conn., by the following cast:

Geraldine Lang	Mary Mannering
Vi Thompson	Amy Ricard
Mrs. Wrighton	Mrs. Hone
Fraulein Handt	Anita Rothe
Mrs. Jars	Rosa Cooke
Mrs. Mathewson	Marian Gardiner
Mrs. Dreed	Kathleen Chambers
Mrs. Harry K. Whipple	Dene Woodruff

The play is in four acts and deals with American life. The local newspapers speak well of the production. Last evening (Monday) the play was presented for the first time in New York at the Garrick Theatre. The performance will be reviewed in the next issue of THE MIRROR.

IRVING TO COME AGAIN.

Sir Henry Irving and the London Lyceum company will, it is announced, appear in New York next October for an engagement of three weeks at the Broadway Theatre. The new Sardou drama, Dante, of which Laurence Irving has made the English version, will be the only play presented. The entire London production will be brought over.

LONDON.

One New Play—Marie Corelli Breaks Out Again—Dan Leno Recovers.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

LONDON, Oct. 18.

Your Gawain had fondly thought (good, easy man) that this week, being all but barren of new plays, would at last be peaceful. But, alas, it was not to be. All sorts of alarums and excursions have occurred, and we are evidently intended by Stage-Manager Fate to make up for the sudden cessation of hostilities between the Lord Chamberlain and the London County Council, of the one part, as they say in legal documents, and the London theatrical manager, of the other part.

Our little simoom this week has been literary as well as dramatic. For example, Marie Corelli, who has hitherto led us to believe that she never wants her name mentioned in any newspaper paragraph, has been writing to the editor of the Gentlewoman to protest against her name having been left out of that journal's report of a swagger gathering at Braemar, where our royalties and others go to stag-shoot. The brilliant, though at times bewildering, Marie pointed out in her Corellian communication that certain titled ladies at this gathering had been taken there by her and that therefore she had a right to be mentioned. It is but fair to the gifted Marie to say that her letter of protest was marked "private and confidential." But anon the Gentlewoman editor not only wrote to Marie pointing out that, taking always to heart that lady's often expressed horror of seeing her name in print, he had given instructions that her name was not to be mentioned in his paper, and that he himself had taken the Corellian cognomen out of the complained-of report. Furthermore, after what seems to have been due notice, the said editor published Miss Corelli's somewhat volcanic epistle together with his own correspondence thereon, and now the bright and bruisy lady novelist, who lives at Shakespeareanville-on-Avon, has notified the Gentlewoman's gentleman that she will bring an action for libel against him and all the papers that published her and his letters. It is a pretty quarrel as it stands, but as the matter is sub-judice, as the lawyers put it, I reserve for the present my own personal opinion and merely content myself by chronicling the matter.

Another affair that has caused something of a hurricane is a speech given a few days ago by our doubtless well-meaning War Secretary, Mr. Brodrick. In this speech the Secretary denounced a certain theatre management for having, it was alleged, a few nights previous refused to allow a soldier to sit in a certain part of the theatre—the circle, I think. It was an open secret that the management pointed out was that at Daly's, which the management's other name is George Edwardes. Sundry papers took the matter up, pro and con, and anon the great George Edwardes defended himself stoutly, showing that he never refused any soldier in uniform admission except in parts where evening dress—that is, swallow-tails and things—is the rule. He added that his plays at Daly's with songs about Tommy Atkins and about patriotism and military and naval concerns had done a great deal to popularise the services of late years, and that, moreover, he had for months past been passing in free large numbers of uniformed soldiers and sailors, British, colonial and otherwise. This is true, but a newspaper war is still raging over the matter. For my own part on this subject, I agree with Rudyard Kipling, with whom I do not always agree—namely, that I have yet to learn that "the Widdy's uniform" (by "widdy," Rud. Kip. meant our late Queen) is the soldierman's disgrace.

To further stir up the matter, we have had Sir Charles Wyndham bringing an action against the builders of his next new theatre for alleged delay in building, &c., a case at present undecided. Sir Henry Irving has been again speaking on what he, but not many of us, regard as the need for a municipal theatre and in his speech he administered strong tapioca to the class of stage entertainment which he calls the "high kicking rubbish." Moreover, one of our South Coast theatres, the huge Brighton smoking theatre known as the Eden, has been nearly burned down. All of its stage is destroyed.

The aforesaid Charles Wyndham was last Sunday duly dined by the O. P. Club by way of congratulating him on his recent knighthood, for which, by the way, he must in a day or two go to see the King and be tapped on the prompt-side shoulder with the Royal sword. Sunday's gathering was gay and bright, some 350 guests and guestesses sitting down and consuming the repast in the volatile Charles' honor. The knightly diner made a bright speech, and all went merry as the proverbial marriage-bell—and perhaps more so.

There has been only one new production this week up till now, another one being postponed from last Thursday until to-night—namely, Mrs. Willoughby's Kiss, at the Avenue. The one production aforesaid was of the suburban pattern, The London Fireman, written by Arthur Shirley and the late George Conquest, and produced at the Surrey last Monday. The London Fireman has a strong story that shows how two babies were changed at nurse; how one grew up bad and enjoyed, pro tem., vast property and titles that belonged to the other, who grew up and became a London fireman and, thanks to being that, the good one was enabled to rescue his long-persecuted bride from a fire, while the bad one was crushed by Nemesis and had to give up all his worldly possessions to the good one, who with his rescued bride lived happy ever after. All this is pretty well-worn material, but it has been so deftly compounded that the drama is deeply interesting all the time. The hero and the heroine are respectively well played by Ernest Leicester and Mrs. Bennett, the handsome play-acting wife of Joseph Bennett, the celebrated billiard player.

Tod Sloane's sister, Blanche, has made a highly successful debut as an acrobat at the Oxford this week. Ida Fuller, sister of La Loie, is scoring amain with fire and serpentine dances at the Empire. Marie Lloyd started again in London this week, but had to give up through illness. She is better to-day, however. So is Dan Leno, who will, I am assured, positively make his reappearance at the London Pavilion on Monday.

Among the most important imminent new plays are the aforesaid Mrs. Willoughby's Kiss, at the Avenue to-night; A Free Lance, by THE MIRROR'S Montreal correspondent, W. A. Tremayne, at the Britannia on Monday; Murray Carson, and Malcolm Watson's adaptation, Captain Kettle, at the Adelphi next Thursday, and Henry V. Esmond's comedy, My Lady Virtue, to be produced by Arthur Bourchier, at the Garrick next Monday week.

J. M. Barrie's new comedy, The Admirable Crichton, is due at the Duke of York's in a few days, and Lewis Waller will give the first London production of your native made play, Monsieur Beaucaire, at the Comedy next Saturday.

I have to announce the respective resolves of three leading London managers to play Shakespearean pieces anon. They are as follows: Beerbohm Tree, either Richard the Second or Othello; George Alexander, as Romeo, and Arthur Bourchier, the bright and breezy, as Othello, if you please.

GAWAIN.

JULIA MARLOWE'S TOUR CLOSES.

Julia Marlowe, whose portrait appears on the first page of this issue of THE MIRROR, was taken ill during her engagement at Providence week before last, and though she played all the week she collapsed on Oct. 26 and word was sent canceling her time for last week in Baltimore. She came at once to this city, where it was found that nervous exhaustion would necessitate an indefinite rest, and her tour in Queen Flametta was abandoned, for the present at least. Miss Marlowe left the city on Tuesday for the Virginia Hot Springs, where she intends to rest for six weeks. It was thought at first that the company might fill dates with a substitute for Miss Marlowe, but this matter had not been decided up to the hour of going to press and it is hardly likely that such a measure will be taken.

PROFESSIONAL DOINGS.

Charles Dickson, who is pictured above, is playing the title-role this season in Quincy Adams Sawyer. In both New York and Boston his work was praised unstintedly by the critics, and although he was offered recently the leading role in a comedy to be produced on Broadway he decided to continue under his present management. In connection with Herbert Hall Winslow he has written a play entitled Colby's Contest, in which he will star next season. Mr. Dickson's excellent work as a light comedian is well known throughout the country, and it will be good news to many of his admirers, especially in the West and Northwest, that he will visit them again as a star. It is intended to surround him with a company of players of acknowledged cleverness, as several of the parts are on a par with the star's.

Walter E. Perkins' The Man from Mexico opened its season at Wilmington, Del., on Oct. 27. The cast, headed by Leslie Morosco and Leila Shaw, includes Edward Warren, Louis Peters, Clarence Baker, James Ordstrand, Robert White, George Fisher, Joseph Holland, William Struggles, Marguerite Hammond, Fanny Fisher, and Virginia Milton. The production is under the direction of Edward Warren.

Eduard Waldmann, the German-English actor, now touring the Middle West in The Merchant of Venice, contemplates producing during his Chicago engagement his version of Julius Cæsar, Mr. Waldmann alternating Brutus and Cassius, Lawrence Darrell, his leading man, to play opposites.

E. D. Shaw has closed his engagement with Weary Willie Walker to assume the management of Eduard Waldmann. Mr. Shaw, after taking his star to the coast, playing all large Western cities, will have him return by Canada to play East before going to Europe.

The Shaw Theatre, Hutchinson, Kan., has been purchased by F. W. Casner, of that city, and given a new name, the Home Theatre.

Robin Ellis was heard in dramatic recital at the New York College of Music last Tuesday evening. He was assisted by Christine Hanselmann, soprano; Edith Belle Roberts, violiniste, and Frank Howard Warner, accompanist. Shakespeare, Bret Harte, Jane Barlow, Walter Scott, and Kate Douglas Wiggin were the authors interpreted. Mr. Ellis' heavy work shows intelligence and good reading, but the Scotch and Irish dialect selections reveal a spark of genius. His rendition of Scott's "Young Lochinvar" is a gem. In Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Penelope's Scotch Letter," as in all the Scotch and Irish recitations Mr. Ellis catches the native humor and dialect perfectly. Miss Hanselmann sang "Jerusalem," "The Swallows," and "Nannie Frew." She has a clear coloratura soprano of good range. Her numbers pleased the audience. Miss Roberts' violin solos were a pleasing feature of the programme. She draws a good bow, but her tone quality will doubtless improve with greater experience. There was a good attendance.

Owing to the illness of the leading lady, Louise Erwin, The Pay Train company closed at Morgantown, W. Va., on Oct. 22. Miss Erwin was taken to Chicago for treatment, and the company will reopen on Nov. 9.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward's dramatisation of her latest novel, "Eleanor," was produced at the Court Theatre, London, on Oct. 30. It is reported to have proven of high literary quality and much psychological interest though lacking in dramatic value.

Edward S. Abeles, of Alice Fischer's company, was called to St. Louis on Oct. 31, by the serious illness of his mother. Douglas E. Fairbanks, who will soon replace Mr. Abeles in the cast, played his part on short notice.

The Cercle Litteraire Franco-American, which is a society of French people, organised for the purpose of mutual recreation and study, will hold weekly meetings at their rooms, 138 East Thirty-fourth Street, during the Winter. Some very enjoyable evenings are anticipated, as the society has many brilliant men on its rolls.

Florence Gale, who has made such a hit as Mary Blenkarn in The Middleman, has retired from that company.

Ralph Stuart will return this week to his old position as leading man of the Henry V. Donnelly Stock company at the Murray Hill Theatre, succeeding William Bramwell. After leaving the Donnelly company three seasons ago Mr. Stuart played a long term at the American Theatre and later starred at the head of his own company in the West.

James B. Mackie, comedian with Charles H. Yale's Everlasting Devil's Auction company, and Mrs. Mackie (Louise Sanford) were tendered a banquet in Shreveport, La., on Oct. 3 after the performance.

The new color effects to be used in Dan Daly's production of The New Clown have been arranged by Clara Lipman.

Wallace Munro returned to town last week from the South, where he has been launching his new star, Mrs. Brune, in the Marion Crawford play, Unorna. Mr. Munro reports that the production has received enthusiastic praise from the press in every city that has been visited. It is probable that Unorna will be seen in New York in the Spring. Mr. Munro's other attractions, Andrew Robson in Richard Carvel, and Rupert of Hentzau, are doing excellent business in other parts of the country.

The first performance this season by students of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts will be given at the Empire Theatre on the afternoon of Nov. 6. The programme will consist of a prologue written for the occasion by Anna Hempstead Branch, with music by Robert O. Jenkins; a one-act melodrama founded upon Ouderra's painting, "The Last Appeal," and a three-act comedy entitled A Young Scapegrace, which is an adaptation from the French by Elizabeth C. Brunner.

Willard Foster joined Maude Hillman at Pittsfield, Mass., on Oct. 30.

Louise Randolph, who is playing the heavies at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Boston, was badly hurt at a performance of Human Spiders last week, but is now on the road to recovery and expects to reappear shortly in The Slaves of Russia.

A novel performance occurred at the Grand Opera House, San Antonio, Texas, on Oct. 28. Colonel Zach Mulhall, the owner of a ranch near San Antonio, attended the performance of Human Hearts on that evening with his cowboy band and a few friends. During the evening the band entered into the spirit of the melodrama with fervor. They fired off their pistols, gave exhibitions of lassoing and did other "stunts," to the edification of the players as well as the large audience present.

Hattie Williams resigned from the Rogers Brothers' company last week and will be succeeded by Maude Raymond.

Henry E. Dixey, by arrangements perfected last week, will star later in the present season in Clyde Fitch's play, The Last of the Dandies, under the management of Amelia Bingham.

Grayce Scott and Fletcher Norton, the leading man, have retired from Mrs. Osborne's Playhouse, and Tommy Rot will soon go to the cutting establishment of two well-known playwrights, it is said, and the company will be reorganised.

Weedon Grossmith gave a Hallowe'en party on the stage of the Princess Theatre last Friday night after the performance of The Night of the Party.

Maud Hobson, of The Night of the Party company, at the Princess Theatre was suddenly taken ill on Thursday and was unable to appear in the matinee performance. Her role was taken by Marion Abbott, who won much applause for her impersonation.

Maude Adams left Paris for New York on Oct. 30.

John Mitthauer, formerly the financial secretary of the Musical Mutual Protective Union, was arraigned in the Harlem police court last Friday on a charge of being short in his accounts. In defense he said that he had made good the shortages of the union from his own pocket on many occasions. He was held for trial in $1,500 bail.

The case of Esther Lyons against W. A. Brady was decided in favor of the defendant in the Supreme Court last Friday. Miss Lyons claimed $6,000 damages because of the failure of Mr. Brady to produce On the Klondike, with herself as star.

Clarke and Nealow have leased the Matteawan Opera House of Matteawan, N. Y., and will manage it hereafter.

Orchestras, bands, high class musical organizations and soloists, whose itineraries bring them near Pittsburg, will please write on what terms they will furnish a few hours' music at the Sunday afternoon meetings in Bijou Theatre, conducted by Chaplain Edward S. Young, of the Actors' Church Alliance, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Pittsburg.

BERNHARDT IN GERMANY.

For the first time since 1870 Sarah Bernhardt appeared in Germany on the night of Oct. 27. She played Fedora at the Royal Theatre in Berlin before an audience of extraordinary size and brilliancy. The Emperor and Empress sent her a huge wreath of flowers and a laurel wreath with the French and German colors intertwined was presented to her.

The audience, which included members of the nobility and the leading social personages of Berlin, greeted her coldly at first, but as the performance progressed the applause became frequent, and after the last curtain fell there was a tremendous demonstration of approval. Madame Bernhardt came to the footlights and said, "If statesmen can forget, so can I."

The visit of Bernhardt has aroused again in Germany the question of her nationality. A newspaper of Berlin asserted last week that she was born in Frankfort and that her father was a horse dealer named Feibel.

BLANCHE WALSH AS SALAMMBO.

Blanche Walsh's opening as Salammbo in Stanislaus Stange's play, The Daughter of Hamilcar, occurred at the Court Theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., on Oct. 28, having been postponed one day because of the actress' indisposition. Star, play and production scored an impressive success and the critics waxed enthusiastic about them. Honors were shared by Charles Dalton as a barbarian chieftain. The play is seen this week in Chicago.

OBITUARY.

James S. Burdette, the well-known humorist and entertainer, died at his residence in this city on Oct. 23, of pneumonia, after an illness of one week. At the time of his death Mr. Burdette was fifty-one years of age. For over twenty years he had been a prime favorite in church and lyceum circles, and the best proof of his success was that he was re-engaged over and over again for the same courses. In one place he appeared no less than thirty-eight times in twenty years. He had a thorough knowledge of every dialect, and had a fund of really good stories that was inexhaustible. He could entertain a congregation of the severest, longest faced church members that were ever gathered together, and make faces wreath in smiles that were accustomed to frown on the follies and vanities of the world. He could bring tears to the eyes of the most unimpressionable old curmudgeon that ever sat in a front seat and tried to freeze an entertainer with a stony stare. He could go into the most Bohemian company and make blase men who had heard every good story that was ever told shriek with laughter at his quaint conceits. He was at home in any company, and had selections to fit every occasion, and on account of his talent he was enthusiastically indorsed by men prominent in every walk of life. There are performers in vaudeville to-day, earning large salaries, who owe their success to the coaching of "Jim" Burdette. His untimely passing will bring regret to innumerable people, whose lives have been cheered by his unfailing good humor. His funeral took place from St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, New York, and was largely attended. The interment was at Woodlawn.

Harry Stewart Putnam, well-known in the profession as an actor and singer, died at the home of his mother, in Newark, N. J., on Oct. 24, of peritonitis. He was thirty-one years old.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

Keith's Union Square.

The Ten-Ichi Troupe, the Fadettes Woman's Orchestra, and Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne, who change their bill to A Village Lawyer, are the holdovers. The other entertainers are Amelia Summerville, monologist; Cole and Johnson, George C. Davis, Pulfrey and Hilton, Conley and Klein, the Martinettas, Ed Gray, Claudius and Corbin, the Chamberlains, Sophie Burnham, and George Yeomans. The biograph and stereopticon remain.

Tony Pastor's.

The bill is headed by the Four Musical Cuttys, and includes Alice Maydue, character comedienne, who makes her American reappearance; William H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols, James Richmond Glenroy, Hume, Ross and Lewis, the Two Fantas, Tommy and Laura Harris, Robbins and Trenaman, La Vine and Alma, G. W. Hussey, Fred Dunworth, Edward Doyle, and the vitagraph.

Proctor's Fifth Avenue.

Minnie Seligman, who was not in the cast last week, makes her reappearance as Rosalind in a special production of As You Like It. The cast will also include Florence Reed, Paul McAllister, Gus Weinberg, George Friend, Ada Lavick, Verner Clarges, Gerald Griffin, and Ivah M. Wills. The vaudeville numbers are headed by Madame Emmy and her poodles, and the kalatechnoscope.

Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street.

On the Bowery, a melodrama of New York life, is the offering of the stock company, the cast including Edna Archer-Crawford, Ralph Cummings, R. V. Ferguson, Richard Lyle, William Cullington, and others. The original scenery is used. James J. Morton and the kalatechnoscope are in the vaudeville contingent.

Proctor's Twenty-third Street.

Kelly's Zouaves, who do a military drill, and George Evans, the comedian, are the headliners of a bill that includes Kitamura's Japs, H. V. Fitzgerald, Sullivan and Pasquelina, Imhoff and Conn, Lotto and Delia, Bassonettas and Newman, Whitely and Bell, Paley's kalatechnoscope and other attractions.

Proctor's 125th Street.

The Wages of Sin, with Adelaide Keim and Ned Howard Fowler in the leading roles, is this week's attraction. Charles M. Seay, Sol Aiken and other favorites will assist. Joe Welch and Paley's kalatechnoscope offer vaudeville diversion.

Weber and Fields'.

Twirly Whirly remains the bill, with Lillian Russell, William Collier, Peter F. Dailey, Bessie Clayton, John T. Kelly, Charles Bigelow, and Weber and Fields in the cast. The new addition, which is to be called Humming Bird and Onions, will not be produced until Thursday, Nov. 6.

Hurtig and Seamon's.

John T. Sullivan and company head a bill including Waterbury Brothers and Tenny, Joe Maxwell and company, Clayton, Jenkins and Jasper, James Thornton, Ada Arnoldson, Bellman and Moore, Rastus and Banks, and the vitagraph.

THE BURLESQUE HOUSES.

DEWEY.—Waldron and Bryant's Trocadero Burlesquers will keep things lively on Fourteenth Street this week.

LONDON.—The High Rollers are rolling high for the benefit of Manager Curtin's patrons.

MINER'S BOWERY.—The Knickerbocker Burlesquers is the attraction this week.

OLYMPIC.—Abe Leavitt's Rentz-Santley company holds the boards.

LAST WEEK'S BILLS.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE.—Ten Ichi and his troupe of wonder workers made their first appearance at this house and scored an unqualified success. A pretty Oriental setting lent an additional charm to the turn, which is unique and diverting from first to last. Pretty Ten Katsu did some very pretty little tricks in magic, and her pigeon-English caused much laughter. The thumb-tying trick, which was conducted under the personal supervision of Impresario George Homans, baffles explanation. Homans took particular delight in phasing a gabby old gentleman in the first row who was inclined to be skeptical. Ten Ichi is the inventor of this trick, which is the most mystifying thing in vaudeville at the present day. The finish of the act, in which Ten Ichi causes fountains of water to spring from unexpected places, is also very puzzling. Taken as a whole, the turn is worthy of all praise. Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne presented a new sketch by Mr. Cressy, called Bill Biffin's Baby, which is one of the neatest, funniest and most charming bits that has come from his prolific pen. The scene, very cleverly arranged by the way, shows the interior and exterior of a New England farmhouse. The footlights are turned out, and the room in which the action takes place is lighted from the sides and top, making an extremely pretty effect. The story is that of an old bachelor farmer, who has received a letter from a man named Bill Biffin, to whom he had loaned $100 twenty years before. The letter is from South Africa, and tells the recipient that Biffin is dying and is sending him his baby, as there is no one else to care for her. She is to arrive that evening, and the hired man is dispatched to the depot to bring her home. The old man secures a cradle and a nursing bottle, and spends his spare moments reading a big book, called "Hints to Young Mothers." While he is reading the door opens and a young woman enters. She announces that she is Biffin's daughter, and her host is completely "flabbergasted." During the subsequent conversation he learns that she is the daughter of an old woman of the village, who has recently died, leaving him all of her property in her will, which the old man promptly burns, after the young woman has retired for the night. The dialogue of the play is exceedingly crisp and Mr. Cressy spoke his lines in that dry way of his which brings their meaning home with full force to the audience. Miss Dayne was entirely pleasing as the "baby." Mr. Cressy is to be congratulated on his progressiveness. It would be well if there were more people like him in vaudeville. Marie Remington, of Hines and Remington, again proved herself one of the most versatile and entertaining comediennes on the stage. Instead of saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, I will now, with your kind permission, give you an imitation," etc., she goes right ahead and imitates everybody under the sun with unerring accuracy and unfailing good humor. Her fun is refreshingly original and she bubbles over with merriment like a gushing spring. Mr. Hines was an able assistant, and helped materially in bringing out his wife's good points. The laughing hit of the bill was made by Sam Elton, a European performer, who does some of the slickest work ever seen here. His act is entirely in pantomime, and consists of a succession of very funny acrobatic "stunts." His supernumerary, dressed in a long coat and a high hat, and holding a big armful of soup plates, were exceedingly well done, and brought round after round of applause. His act is original and very diverting. Carroll Johnson was successful with his songs, dances and patter. His raiment is as gorgeous as ever, and he lacks none of the grace for which he is celebrated. Franco Piper, a European artist, performs skillfully on several banjos and juggles the instruments with great dexterity. Edwards and Rooney have a lot of funny dialogue that won plenty of laughs, and a batch of parodies that are really amusing. They scored a pronounced hit. The Brittons, especially the male member, did some wonderful buck dancing. Johnstone Brothers, xylophonists; Wood and Wood, ring performers; John Healy, comedian; Murphy and Andrews, conversationalists; Elizabeth Knight, vocalist; Professor Dodd and his dog, the biograph and the stereopticon were also in the bill. The Fadettes Orchestra, of Boston, continued their very successful engagement and were applauded as liberally as they were during their first week.

TONY PASTOR'S.—Waterbury Brothers and Tenny headed an excellent bill and entertained with their melange of mirth and melody in a very pleasing way. Lucy Clark, the Irish contralto, made her American debut and scored a decided hit with four good songs, "The Green Isle of Erin," "Rory O'More," "Angus MacDonald," and "Going to Kildare." Miss Clark is a handsome woman and has a pleasing personality as well as a rich and well cultivated voice. She is very clever in stage business, and brought out the full meaning of the songs with excellent effect. She was particularly successful with "Rory O'More," which she sang very archly and with a keen sense of its humor and sentiment. The Seven Reed Birds presented Lookout for Johnson, in which many new and catchy songs are introduced. John Dunn, assisted by Miss Welsted and Miss Hope, was seen in his own sketch, The Last Lesson, which tells of the love of a German music teacher for a pretty girl, who is chaperoned by a giddy aunt. The lines are bright and amusing and the little touch of sentiment at the end winds up a very pretty and pleasing act. Mr. Dunn has a thorough control of the Dutch dialect and plays the violin very well indeed. His assistants lent him good support. Lillian and Shorty De Witt kept the house in good humor for twenty minutes. "Shorty" is nearly as funny as little "Buster" Keaton. The Kumins Trio, including the precocious child, made a hit in That Boy of Mine. Tom Moore gave a very accurate imitation of Irving Jones, offering some new coon songs. Others were Shedman's dogs and monkeys, the Twin Sisters Meredith, Alburtus and Jessie Millar, the De Muths, Lillian Murths Le Roy, and Clinton Burgess. The vitagraph was shown as usual.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET.—Phroso, the mechanical doll, was the feature of the bill, and the quaint antics and amusing business introduced puzzled and entertained good-sized audiences. Gracie Emmet and her company appeared to advantage in the funny farce, Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband, which contains several amusing situations and many lines that are provocative of laughter. The parodies and jokelets offered by Joe Flynn found a ready response. Duffy, Sawtelle and Duffy scored once again in their sketch, Papa's Sweetheart, in which the young Duffy boy is very captivating. Domestic Pets, as done by Ellsworth and Burt, proved very diverting, and laughter followed many of the lines and bits of business. This is a hard working team and they deserve the success they have achieved. Others in the programme were Worden and Shepard, illustrated songs; Ouhama, Japanese equilibrist; Grust and Gruet, the Zoellers, the Musical Ravens, Lavine and Alma, and Paley's perennial kalatechnoscope with new views.

PROCTOR'S FIFTY-EIGHTH STREET.—Ralph Cummings had every opportunity to demonstrate his ability as a player of strength and force last week, when The Bells was presented by the stock company. Mr. Cummings gave a thoroughly enjoyable performance of the very difficult part of Mathias, and carried the sustained attention of the audience from beginning to end. Robert V. Ferguson was very effective as Master Walter, Edna Archer-Crawford was pleasing as Annette, and Frank McGlynn's deep, resonant voice lent much force to the part of the mesmerist. Claude H. Cooper, George C. Pearce, James W. Castle, Wallace McCutcheon, Frank Beard, J. B. McDonald, Grace Huntington, and Leslie Lyman were also in the cast. A curtain-raiser called Cinders, written by Lillie Tinsley, was cleverly done by George C. Pearce and Margaret Kirker. Lee and Kingston, Wilson Brothers, and Paley's kalatechnoscope appeared to advantage between the acts.

PROCTOR'S 125TH STREET.—The Power of the Press, a strong melodrama, pleased the faithful patrons of this house so well that seats were hard to get. Ned Howard Fowler gave a strong performance of Steve Carson, and had the sympathy of the audience with him all the time. Adelaide Keim, as the suffering heroine, was appropriately tearful and very convincing. Louis Bresen gave a strong portrayal of Morgan, and Sol Aiken was successful as Mr. Hosford. Asa Lee Willard and Albert Vennie also scored. Others in the cast were H. D. Hawley, Charles M. Seay, Richard Lyle, Albert Roberts, Andrew Stephens, Duncan Harris, Robert Harris, H. Bruce Delamater, George Franklin, Lewis Owen, Polly Steckwell, Bessie Lee Lestina, Cecylle Mayer, and Lillian Goldsmith. George Evans, with whom it is always "Summertime," and Georgie Lingard contributed diverting specialties.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE.—A Texas Steer, one of the best of the Hoyt comedies, was fairly well presented by the stock company. The piece was well staged and run with much smoothness, but it seemed to lack snap. Good work was done by Gus C. Weinberg as Brander and Florence Reed as Bessy. Gerald Griffin made a distinct hit and surprised his friends by a very carefully studied and extremely effective portrayal of the part of Pinkstick, the colored politician. Verner Clarges as Major Toll and William Cullington as Othello were excellent. Sydney Grant's monologue is new and pleasing, and Keeley Brothers, Reid Sisters, the La Rosas, Charles De Camo, Marie Fourpaugh, and the kalatechnoscope were the other features of the vaudeville bill.

HURTIG AND SEAMON'S.—Laughter was incessant during the brisk sketch, Mag Haggerty's Father, written by Will M. Cressy and presented by Ryan and Richfield. Barry and Halvers were also well received, and the songs and repartee of Melville and Stetson kept the house in good humor. Others were Seymour and Dupree, Raymond and Kurtenay, Hayes and Healey, Murphy and Nichols, and Journay's "Luna."

WEBER AND FIELDS'.—The fun was fast and furious last week as usual, and the tidy little theatre was filled to its capacity at every performance. The airship scene of Weber and Fields is alone worth the price of admission, but there are many other good things in the entertainment, all of which are thoroughly appreciated.

The Burlesque Houses.

DEWEY.—Rush and Fulton's City Club Burlesquers found favor with large audiences throughout the week. The entertainment opened with a travesty called On Board the City Club, the authorship of which is credited to "Father Neptune." Jeanette Furio had the leading role, and she was ably assisted by the entire company and a strong chorus. The capital entertainers in the olio were the three Lane Sisters, Grove and Greene, Hawthorne and Burt, Reid and Gilbert, and Rose Curlis. Paxton's Living Art Panorama, imported from the Folies Bergere at an alleged expense of $30,000, and Jeanette Furio's act, An Affair of Honor, were special features. The bill closed with a burlesque called The Queen of Folly.

MINER'S BOWERY.—The Big City Sports were sporty enough to please the rather particular patrons of this house last week, and their antics were provocative of much merriment. Prominent in the aggregation are Crissie Sheridan, Dryden and Leslie, Nonnetta and La Rue, Hazel Burt, and the Everett Trio. A Mistaken Society and Fun at Brighton were the burlesques.

LONDON.—Fred Irwin's Big Show delighted the habitues of the London, presenting a melange of mirth and music. The Knapp Cure and An Operatic Rehearsal were the burlesques, which afforded the members of the company abundant opportunity to show their talents. The Bison City Quartet, the Salvaggis, the Rooney Sisters, Waldron Brothers, and Lester Curran made hits.

OLYMPIC.—Rice and Barton's Big Extravaganza company, in its first New York appearance of the season, made a strong bid for popular approbation. The burlesques are likely and the olio is excellent.

HOUDINI'S ENTERTAINING CHAT.

MUNICH, Bavaria, Oct. 6.

Munchen at the present time is enjoying what is known here as the Octoberfest, and is something on the order of our American Fair Grounds Exhibits. Thousands of small theatres have been built, also thousands of beer-drinking booths, and therefore the Munchener public is happy. Everything imaginable is on exhibition. Among the freaks I recognized many Americans. Barnum's Astecs are here. They are now gray-headed and wear whiskers (all except the lady folks), and one of them almost has a beard. The Living Skeleton is married daily to the fat lady for the benefit of the public and incidentally the admission fees. The strong man makes love to the tattooed beauty; the magician sells tickets at the door and manages to mix people up with his short change methods, and so it goes. It reminded me of the time when I was traveling with Welsh Brothers' Circus through Pennsylvania and had to be a freak myself. I was put in a small den and called "Prejea, the Wild Man of Mexico." I remember once when Clint Newton threw me some raw meat to eat, he hit me in the eye, and I would not look at him for three weeks, as my eyes were closed. That caused me to become tame, and some one else had to play wild man of Mexico.

The only thing that is a failure here is some kind of a Wild West Show from America. Somehow all of the American Wild West people speak nothing but German, but perhaps they come from Milwaukee, which accounts for this. Homeculus, the artificial man, that is on exhibition, is featured heavily. If it was put on exhibition in America they would be arrested for obtaining money under false pretences. It is a small figure of a man, dressed as an artist, who draws your picture while you wait. The whole trick is simply this: the man who is concealed under the table puts his arms into the dummy figure and does all the work, being concealed by a crude arrangement of mirrors.

At the Blumensaals, Alburtus and Bartram are features. James Bard, from Reading, is featured to open at Kils Colosseum. I am at Circus Carré, making my usual sensation, packing them in at advanced prices. Am going to England from here to play contracts that I have kept postponing for two years, and now I must either play or pay a large fine. In Amsterdam the New Rembrandt opened with the following large programme: Wood and Bates, Sig. and Sis., Pasquilla, Kara, Tortajada, Les Dartos, the Terezzas, the Maskwoods, Gautier, Leon and Kinko, the Parisian Star, Nanon and Mealy. The Marco Twins are at the Scala Theatre, Köln; La Belle Dazie, Henri French and the Three Pantzer Brothers are at the Central Theatre, Dresden. At the Victoria Saalon, same city, Fougere is the drawing card. Juno Salmo is making both ends meet in Mellini's Theatre, Hanover. Carl Hertz is doing his tricks in Appollo, Düsseldorf, and the Four Avoles are pounding their xylophones in Kopenhagen and from reports are making quite a hit. In Lille, France, Ralph Johnson and Northen B. Smith are astonishing the natives, and Leonadas has his own troupe, making a tour through Italy.

Mazie King is at Tichy's, Prag, where there is also one of Newsky's "Girl with the Golden Hair." He has two acts like this, and has completely cornered the market. If the original Girl with the Golden Hair were to come over now she would not be placed at any price, as Newsky has his acts booked at the first-class places and otherwise. Taciano is in Wurzburg, warbling to the Wurzburgioners, also telling them tales of when he was in America. If a performer ever praised America that performer is Taciano. Circus Casper, in Stockholm, Sweden, has closed its doors and none of the performers received any salary. The management claims to have lost over 40,000 kronins. Robbins and Debassel are in Paris, at the Olympia. The Queen of Belgium died Sept. 19. The theatres all closed up at once, but after her funeral they opened up again. With the Queen's burial there is no more mourning.

The police have forbidden the showing of wild animals in Berlin. Circus Busch offered to pay 50,000 marks to any charitable institution mentioned by the police if they would allow him to engage a lion tamer or give a wild beast performance, but they refused to accept his offer. Cleo de Merode plays a week's engagement at the Krystal Palast, Leipzig. Herr G. W. Otto, the former editor of the Düsseldorfer Artist Zeitung, has started a new theatrical paper which he calls Otto's Newest Artist. At present there are about eight theatrical newspapers, and were one to take all he would have to read all day to keep informed. The Programme, the official newspaper of the Artist Lodge, is gradually moving up to first place, and it is only a question of time ere it will be the foremost theatrical newspaper in Germany.

A bull-fight at night has lately been exploited in Seville, Spain. The arena was lit with thirty-four big electric lights, while the rest of the place was illuminated with acetylene lights. Shortly before this proposed "Fest" it thundered and rained in a fearful manner, but this did not keep the people from coming in full force, as at least 12,000 were in attendance.

The bull-fight was of a peculiar nature, for, in the first place, instead of having the usual man bull-fighters young girls not out of their teens were advertised as bull-fighters. All critics decided that these female bull-fighters managed to make a successful frost of the whole affair.

The public became greatly disgusted with the female bull-fighters, and cursed and hissed them. Those who had anything to throw threw it into the arena. According to the newspapers, the way the audience cursed the fair senoritas was a shame. Things might have ended in a riot but for an accident in which nineteen-year-old Manuela Gonsalvo was thrown by a bull and severely gored. As she was carried out she tried to laugh in a heroic manner. This finished the female bull-fighters, as the rest lost their pluck. The Governor is being blamed for allowing this affair to take place. Had he refused to permit it he would have been blamed any way, so there you are.

The police here are looking to arrest a whole family, or rather an entire circus. They were implicated in some scandal, vanished, and now cannot be found anywhere. This is the first instance where an entire circus has vanished from the face of the earth, leaving no trace behind.

The new Central Theatre, in Chemnitz, will be ready to open Dec. 1. A great many American acts are booked for this house for November, and as it is not completed yet, why, they will have to lose this month. It is very hard to fill in a month at such short notice, the managers book so far ahead. Another theatre closes and pays no salaries. This time it is the Theatre Boldini, in Italy. Same old story, managers tell the actor-folks to "call to-morrow for the money," and they are still waiting.

Willi Pasquart, of the Dancing Pasquarts, writes me from Moscow that the theatre they are working at nearly became food for the flames. The fire was, however, stopped in time, and the performances will go along as merrily as ever. Madame Ada Colley has again taken up variety and opened at the Folies Bergere Sept. 28. Celest is in Kopenhagen. Morton and Elliott, Robertus and Wilfreda, also Little Fred, are at Roanacher's, Vienna. Kara, Robinson Baker Trio, and Griffon and Dubolsat are at the Wintergarten, Berlin. Bud Syder, the cyclist, is in the Central Theatre, Dresden. On the same bill are the Original Black Troubadours, who have been over here quite some time. They are four colored men and do a great singing act. Stanley and Wilson are at the Orpheum, Frankfort-on-Main. Josie Dewitt has opened at the Battenberg, Leipzig; she is doing very well, thank you. The Marco Twins are in Münster, at the Fest Halle; they are doing a lot of new stuff in their act, and are a big hit.

Now that the German performers have united and have really accomplished several good things, the French performers have banded together, have founded a society which is called "Union International des Artists, Administrateurs et Directeurs de Cafes-Concert et Music Hall," which would mean a union for performers, managers and variety managers. This banding together of performers and managers seems to be quite a fad over here, all of which was started by the "White Rats" of America.

The Managers' Association of Germany is secretly making plans. The latest, which has accidentally come out, is that they will try to use as few variety performers as possible. Many of the prominent directors, such as Köhn, of Crystal Palast; Mellini, of Hanover; Brück, of Frankfort, and others, have booked comedy companies for three months in each season, which will cause a great many acts to lay idle this coming year. Whether the new scheme will pay or not remains to be seen. Should it be a success things look pretty bad for German as well as Continental acts.

Fieber, the Keith representative, is on the Continent, booking acts for America. He has earned quite a good name on this side, as all acts generally hunt him up to have him look them over. Newhouse and Ward have opened at the Circus Carré Theatre in Amsterdam, and are making their usual big hit. HARRY HOUDINI.

LILLIAN BURKHART'S FLAIR.

Lillian Burkhart, pictured above, has entered on her seventh consecutive year in vaudeville, a branch of theatricals with which her name has become peculiarly associated. Since the season of 1896-97 she has been playing almost uninterruptedly through the country from coast to coast, and has added so frequently to her repertoire that it now consists of twenty-four one-act plays, ranging from wild farce to a dainty fantasy of fairy-love, and from quiet, polite comedy, to unrelieved melodrama. As she plays season after season in the same theatres, it surely would seem that she has made a secure place for herself in the esteem of lovers of miscellaneous entertainments.

She recently made a revival of her first success, The Salt Cellar, and has found it as appealing as before. She will use it frequently during the season, but is soon to produce, in Omaha, Neb., a new comedietta, called A Strenuous Daisy. She has postponed her revival of Fifty Years Ago, which, as yet, has been acted only in a few cities of the West. It was written for her by Hubert Henry Davies, an English author, whose Cynthia is in rehearsal by Rose De Wolfe, and who has placed comedies for London production with Sir Charles Wyndham and Cyril Maude.

CIRCUS MAN MURDERED.

John A. Walker, who was manager of the side shows connected with the John Robinson Circus, was shot during a performance at Dalton, Ga., on Oct. 18. John Perry, a notorious character, came into the tent and began making insulting remarks to Walker. Without the slightest warning the rough drew a pistol and shot Walker in the abdomen. The wound was not considered serious, and Walker lived until Oct. 28. His assailant was arrested.

IDA FULLER TO SAIL.

Ida Fuller will sail from Europe on Nov. 8 and will open her season of twenty weeks at the Orpheum Theatre, Brooklyn, on Nov. 24. This will give her a start of more than two months over her rival, La Loie, whose success in Paris has necessitated a postponement of her tour until February.

THE BAND GOES ON.

Wont ter see the soldiers march ter-day,
A long, long line in a great p'rade,
An' ev'ry man in his glad array—
Tell yer, 'twas a mighty sight they made!
An' the thing of all that I liked best
Was the tunes the bands played, grand and free;
Wouldn't cared ef I'd missed all the rest,
But the bands don't ever play
When they go by me!

T' other day a circus comes ter town,
An' the p'rade was the best I ever see;
I liked the elephants an' the clown,
An' acrobats is a freak ter me;
But the things I tuk ter be the gun
Was the tunes that the band played cheerily—
I'd give the hull blame show fer them—
But the bands don't ever play
When they go by me!

An' all thro' life it's about that way—
There's lots that's pretty good, yer know,
That makes us kinder want ter stay,
Like soldiers or the circus show.
An' yet there's a thing that's better still,
Life's dearest, sweetest melody—
Ain't heard it an' guess I never will,
Fer it seems that all the bands
Jes' go on by me!

GRUMPY TAGGART.

BOSS AND FENTON'S MISFORTUNES.

Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton have surely been the victims of hard luck during the past week, as they have suffered from a series of misfortunes that would be enough to drive the average person to desperation.

The first appearance of the "hoodoo" was on Oct. 28, when Mrs. Ross had a satchel, containing much money and many valuables, stolen from her as she was on her way from Boston to Providence, to fill an engagement at Keith's Theatre.

Calamity number two was the illness of Mr. Ross, who was forced to come to New York on Thursday to undergo an operation for a trouble with which the Providence physicians were unable to cope. Until he is able to resume work his place will be filled by William Humphrey, late of the Albee Stock company, of Providence.

To cap the climax and make the misery more profound, the sad news reached Mr. and Mrs. Ross that their beautiful house, at Ross-Fenton Farm, near Asbury Park, had been totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday night. The resort was conducted during the past Summer by Charles W. Smith, to whom the place was leased by the owners. The loss was about $12,000, which is fully covered by insurance.

The following account of the fire, from an Asbury Park paper, shows how the trusty firefighters of that famous Summer resort, which is run on severe prohibition principles, act when temptation comes their way:

The employes of the place endeavored to extinguish the fire, but they were bewildered and their efforts failed to check the blaze. Water was scarce, although several chemical extinguishers in the building were not used and were burned up.

Finally word was sent to Chief Scott, asking for the assistance of the Asbury Park Fire Department. The chief rang in three taps, calling out Neptune's engine and hose wagon.

The apparatus made excellent time to the fire. With great difficulty the engine was taken down a steep roadway to the lake. Here it was found that the water was very shallow and filled with dead leaves, preventing the suction of sufficient water to supply two lines of hose.

Howard Le Roy and others procured shovels and dug a hole in the lake sufficiently deep to keep the engine from becoming clogged.

Fully twenty minutes were consumed before water was secured. A large crowd of firemen, representing all the local companies, soon arrived upon the scene.

Up to this time no effort had been made to save any of the furnishings of the building. The first place cleaned out was the cafe. Hundreds of bottles of wines and liquors were removed, and a great quantity of champagne was afterward taken from the cellar and removed to convenient hiding places about the trunks of the trees. The saying that "champagne flowed like water" was true last night if it ever was. In fact, there was more champagne available than there was water, and nearly everybody who left the premises carried away from a pint to two quarts of it.

Proprietor Smith seemed crazed at his loss, and cried while he watched the destruction of the building. He told the firemen to help themselves to the drinkables as they might as well have it as to let it burn up. A second invitation was not required.

About 12.30 o'clock the coal supply ran short and an effort was made to maintain steam by breaking up the rustic chairs and benches, which adorned the grounds. These lasted but a short time. The hose wagon returned for more coal. The engine was shut down and during the interval the flames gained such a headway again that Chief Scott finally gave up the idea of saving any portion of the structure, and at 12.45 the lines of hose were withdrawn. About an hour after the apparatus left for home.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in removing the engine from its position on the lake bank. A long rope was finally procured and a hundred willing hands, strengthened by Mason's best, soon yanked the steamer up the bank.

One of the most disheartened spectators was Charles Ables who, with Mrs. Ross, planned and executed all of the decorations and furnishings in the house. He said that the loss would be a great shock to Mr. Ross, as he had many priceless treasures within the building, some of them having been handed down for hundreds of years from generation to generation.

Ross-Fenton Farm was well-known as a Bohemian resort for Summer people and theatrical folk out for a good time. Mr. Ross was planning to occupy the house as a country home as soon as his lease with Mr. Smith ran out. It is thought that he will rebuild.

"TODY" HAMILTON ARRIVES.

"Tody" Hamilton, the famous wielder of weird and wonderful adjectives for the advertising department of Barnum and Bailey's Circus, arrived home from Europe on Tuesday last. While in Europe Mr. Hamilton visited eight hundred cities and towns, in each of which the people spoke different languages or dialects. He picked up only the adjectives in every town, and has a collection that he would not part with for love or money. The circus played seventeen weeks in Paris, in a building that had to be reconstructed at an expense of $180,000; and in Vienna the improvements on the auditorium in which the circus appeared cost $200,000. The circus is now on its way to America, and when it arrives will go at once into Winter quarters at Bridgeport.

LUKENS HURT BY FALL.

Harry Lukens, of the Four Lukens, the well-known acrobats, was seriously injured by a fall while the troupe were going through their performance at Proctor's Theatre, Newark, N. J., on Tuesday afternoon last. During one of the most intricate tricks the apparatus broke and the performer fell to the stage, tearing a piece of flesh from his leg and injuring his head badly. His injuries were of so serious a nature that it was found necessary to send him to his home in Reading, Pa. The Lukens have been very unfortunate this season. One of them pulled his arm out of its socket while they were at Keith's a few months ago, and since then another member broke his leg.

HURTIG AND SEAMON BRANCH OUT.

Hurtig and Seamon, the hustling managers of Harlem, have taken the Harlem Opera House for a series of Sunday night concerts, beginning on Nov. 2. The population of Harlem is increasing by leaps and bounds, and there is a growing demand for Sunday evening entertainments, as few Harlemites care to take the long journey downtown in search of amusement. It is likely, therefore, that the large seating capacity of the Harlem Opera House will be tested every Sunday evening during the Winter.

SAM ELTON GOING BACK TO EUROPE.

Sam Elton, who has not been in America in eighteen years, arrived here on Oct. 13, to open on the Keith circuit, having bookings up to May, 1903. Owing to some misunderstanding at the Keith houses, and being displeased with his treatment in general, he has cancelled all his bookings after Dec. 6. He will return to Europe, playing the Moss and Thornton time, with Berlin, Lucerne and South Africa to follow.

RAGTIME WRITERS SUED.

Joseph W. Stern and Company, of this city, music publishers, have applied for an injunction against H. T. McPherson and James T. Bryan, author and composer of "Good-Morning, Carrie," "Please Let Me Sleep," and "Those Tantalizing Eyes," to restrain them from composing songs for any other publishers. Stern and Company complain that the song-writers have been turning out work for other publishers, thus violating a contract that they allege is held by them for the exclusive right to the compositions of the defendants.

KEITH'S NEW THEATRE TO OPEN.

Keith's new theatre, on Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, which has been in process of construction for many months, will be thrown open Nov. 10 with a big vaudeville bill. The old Bijou will be turned over to a stock company, that will begin an engagement on the same date.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

Harry Gillette, of Kelly and Gillette, and Ada Watson, daughter of John Watson, were married in London, England, on Oct. 4. Mr. Gillette was one of the original Gillette family.

Ed Latell writes that Madame Herrmann's company is meeting with great success, in which he shares. The co. played a record week at the Bijou, Atlanta, and have broken all records at the Bijou, Birmingham, Ala.

Helen Jackson and Maud Douglas are still in Philadelphia, and are meeting with success at clubs and concerts. They will probably remain in the Quaker City until the holidays.

A flash light picture of an audience at the Empire, Hoboken, taken a few weeks ago, may result in a divorce. A Hoboken man saw the picture and recognized his wife in the crowd, and as she was sitting next to another man the injured husband has brought suit for a separation.

The Ragsnback animals will close their run at the New York within the next two weeks. The succeeding attraction has not yet been selected.

Paul St. Claire, formerly a prosperous song writer, is said to be in distress in this city.

Harry Prestelle and Claudy Radcliffe are now in their eleventh week with Jule Walters' new Eddie Tracked company, presenting their new comedy dancing novelty entitled Nobody at Home, which is quite a hit.

On account of the uncertainty of the weather, Will S. Knoell has closed the Orchard Beach Casino, at Manistee, Mich., for the season.

Thomas A. Collins has a new singing act with several changes of costume.

One of the best novelties presented this season in vaudeville is La Troupe Fantastique. It is a spectacular, dancing act, entitled Faust in Terpsichore. The characters, Faust, Marguerite, and Mephisto, before assumed by three decidedly pretty girls. They carry special scenery, representing a witches' cave, with cobwebs, owls, etc., cleverly arranged on its walls, while weird electrical effects tend to increase the mystery surrounding the act. They open with the "Dance of the Sun." At the finish the dancers' costumes are illuminated with countless tiny electric lights, making one of the prettiest spectacular finales imaginable.

S. W. Combs, former manager of Thomas R. Shea and late of George Samuel's forces, has closed a contract with Madeleine Barber, who owns and controls the foreign rights to Loosing the Leap aerobat. Mr. Combs will act as Miss Barber's manager in Paris and Berlin, leaving New York, accompanied by his wife, on the "St. Paul" Nov. 8.

John A. Berrett, property man, and William B. Lyons treasurer of the Empire Theatre, Hoboken, N. J., are preparing a new act, which they intend submitting to the public in the near future. It is something unique in vaudeville, and they expect to make a big hit with it.

Lorraine Armour opened at the Dixie, Scranton, Pa., on Oct. 27, after spending eleven weeks at her hunting and fishing lodge in Muskoka, Canada. She is at the Empire, Columbus, this week.

H. R. Beal, son-in-law of W. F. Cody, committed suicide by inhaling chloroform at Sheridan, Wyo., on Monday last.

Kling and Gotthold are meeting with success in the new sketch, A Medical Discovery, written for them by Charles Horwitz.

Louis Robie has secured the rights to produce R. T. Sprout's one-act comedy, The Honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Potts, which will be presented by Clyde Darrow and co., under the management of Mr. Robie.

FAIRS AND CARNIVALS.

The Order of Moose will hold a Fair at Spokane, Wash., Oct. 6-16.

The Interstate Fair at Spokane, Wash., opened Oct. 6 and will close Oct. 14.

The annual Street Fair at Macon, Ga., Oct. 6-11 opened under bright prospects. The city is full of visitors, more than a thousand delegates being in attendance at the National Farmers' Congress, and several hundred at the Rat Growers' Convention. The Elks will operate a banner during the week, from which they expect to realize a nice sum to apply to their building fund.

Many of the attractions expected for the annual street fair at Macon, Ga., did not materialize and it was not the success that had been anticipated. The Elks' banner did a good business.

The Southern Inter-State Fair, at Atlanta, Ga., is doing immense business; attendance increasing daily.

The Farmers' National Congress was held at Macon, Ga., Oct. 7-9, fully a thousand delegates being present. The meeting is said to have been the most successful ever held. The Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad gave them a trip to Florida and the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad furnished a train to Savannah and return in order to afford an inspection of the rich farming lands in this section.

The principal amusements at the Fall carnival at Columbus, Ga., Oct. 27 to Nov. 1 will be the Robinson Carnival company. Two of the main features will be the parade of five hundred veterans and the Mardi Gras parade. The carnival will have a queen and ten maids of honor.

The Red Cord Fair at Ottawa, O., was held Oct. 7-11. Attendance was good.

The Elks' Fair and Street Carnival, at New Bern, N. C., closed Oct. 10. It was very successful.

The Bostock-Ferari Company is furnishing the main attractions for a street carnival at Kokomo, Ind., Oct. 13-18, under the auspices of Retail Merchants' Association.

The Elks held a Carnival at Joliet, Ill., Oct. 20-25.

Oct. 12-18 was Carnival week in Knoxville, Tenn., and 70,000 people visited the Elks' Midway, that was a tremendous success. The exhibitions were furnished by the Chadwell Carnival Co.

An industrial and successful exposition, under the auspices of the Elks, was held Oct. 20-25 at the Lake Side Auditorium, Euclid, Wis. Large crowds were in attendance, and were entertained by numerous vaudeville acts and specialties.

The Elks, of Joliet, Ill., held a successful Carnival Oct. 20-25.

The fifty-first annual Fairfield County Fair, held at Lancaster, O., Oct. 15-18, proved a success, and was well attended.

The Fall Festival opened at Columbus, Ga., Oct. 27 with success. Attendance, twenty-five thousand.

The Elks' Carnival at Joplin, Mo., Oct. 20-25 proved a great success. The Cantrell-Moody Company furnished the attractions.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—Palace (Charles S. Marsden, manager): This week's bill has proved a winner. Kittie Arthur in songs, Herbert, magician, and Dora Hosmer in coon songs, were good. Others: Haney and Haney, Kittie Hoffman, Fred Smith, and the comedy, A Night With the Klondike Associates. Week 27-1 opened with large houses. Mona Shaw, John Kluft, Mlle. Zylanto, Phil and Carrie Russell, and Josie Desmond, concluding with the two-act comedy, Johnny Dugan's Troubles.

MADISON, WIS.—Fiom's (Fred Fiom, manager): William Wenden's co. week Oct. 13 did big business. Week 20: Rara and Zara, Gertie Hays, Martin and Ridgway, Dick and Ella Guise, the Patsandis, and Nellie Kingston.—Item: Carnival week 13-18 drew big crowds; street attractions report big business. West 27: Gray and Warner, the Cannons, the Zarellas, Reeb and Levis, and the Martines; also Gotham.

WATERBURY, CONN.—Jacques' Opera Theatre (Jacques and Dodgson, lessees; Frank Dodgson, manager): Week Oct. 20-25: Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, Reidy and Currier, Harry and Eddie Kelly and Fredo, Morello and Princess, and Martinez Sisters went Oct. 20-25 to pleasing large audiences. Cushman, Holcomb and Curtis, Wills and Hassan, Mahoney and Wayne, Burt Howard and Leona Bland, Tuskey and Cox, Gaston and Singer, J. Albert Bourne, and John La Clair are pleasing large audiences 27-1.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Topsy Turvy Burlesquers gave a fairly good bill at the Dewey week Oct. 13 to large houses. Olio: Burt Fuller, George R. Cunningham, Hilger Revere, Williams and Alvena, Franklin Emmett, and Keno, Welch and Melrose. The Tiger Lillies gave a strong bill week 20 to large houses. Olio: John J. Black, Dunbar Brothers, Black and Kemper, the Polos, Cooper and Reynolds, and Julia Nelson.

COLUMBUS, O.—Empire: Week Oct. 20: Lockhart's elephants, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Litchfield, Rossitos, the World's Trio, Hutchison and Burns, and Rae and Brooks to heavy business. Week 27: Lockhart's Elephants, Al Leach and the Three Rosebuds, Milton and Dolly Nobles, Harrigan, A. O. Duncan, Leo and Chapman, and the Sisters Gebest, to fair business.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Star (Miller and Wittig, lessees; M. H. Singer, manager): The Topsy Turvy Burlesquers held the stage Oct. 26-1. The co. gave an excellent entertainment to large patronage. Olio: Burt Fuller, Cunningham and Revere, Williams and Alvena, Frankie Emmett, Keno, Welch and Melrose. Tiger Lillies 2-8.

PATERSON, N. J.—Bijou (Mrs. Ben Leavitt, manager): Harry Morris and a clever co. presented A Night on Broadway Oct. 20-25 to good houses at each performance. The comedy is in two acts, and is full of catchy music and bright dialogue. The star was ably assisted by Mildred Stoller and Carrie Webber. The Brigadier Burlesquers 27-1.

HAMILTON, ONT.—Star (W. Stroud, proprietor; J. Appleton, manager): Week Oct. 20: Charles and Eva Pearce, May Kelley, Ernest Lewis, Giles W. Harrington, Sig. Macco, the Harts, Madge Pamond, and the La Dell Trio. Good performance and business.

CHESTER, PA.—Third Street Opera House (Thomas Malin, proprietor): Pierce Brothers, Cole and Clemens, N. J. Needham, Griffin and Norris, Vivian Wood, Empire and Toledo, and Harry Frazier compose the bill. Business good. Audience well pleased.

Ben Riggs has made a hit as Jonnie Drake in The Game Keeper company.

McComb, Miss., with a monthly pay roll of $100,000 and a drawing population of ten thousand, should prove a good town to attractions visiting the South. A. J. Hackett manages the New Opera House at this place.

Joseph Arthur, author of On the Wabash, warns managers that he will prosecute them if they permit the Mamie Fountain company to present the latter play at their theatres.

Excellent railroad facilities, in addition to a large clientele, are offered to attractions playing the Academy of Music, Orangeburg, S. C. "The best terms to the best attractions" is the motto of Managers W. K. Sease and Company. Open time in January and later can be had, while the management is also booking for 1903-4.

Eva Taylor's recent performance as Mistress Nell with the Grand Opera House Stock, Pittsburg, was a notable success.

The Hamilton Opera House, the new theatre at Burlington, Kan., was opened on Oct. 24 by Mahara's Minstrels, who were greeted by a packed house. The new Hamilton is a very pretty playhouse, with every convenience, under the live management of J. J. Newcomb, who has open time.

Neil Gray has had copyrighted a four-act play, Tracy, the Escaped Convict, founded on the incidents of the latter's career. He intends to send it on the road about Dec. 1.

William Wagner, who played the part of the Imp successfully in When We Were Twenty-one, is at liberty to offers, and may be addressed at 260 West Twenty-fifth Street.

Immediate possession is wanted of two theatrical sleeping cars in the best of condition by the Inness Band and Amusement Company, with offices at 1358 Broadway.

The week of Nov. 24, Thanksgiving week, is open at the Grand Opera House, Rochester, Pa., to a first-class attraction, that should apply at once to Manager W. D. Campbell.

Sidney R. Ellis is completing his two songs, a descriptive song and a love ballad, which Al. H. Wilson will sing in A Prince of Tatters during their New York engagement.

Percy G. Williams' production of Tracy, the Outlaw, is doing phenomenal business wherever it is presented. At the Third Avenue Theatre, New York, nearly one thousand people were turned away nightly. The play is not as blood curdling as might be supposed, and the plot follows closely upon the events of the famous outlaw's career.

The King of Trumps opened at the Kensington, Philadelphia, on Oct. 27, to one of the largest houses of the season. Business continued good all the week. Will A. Peters in the title-role established himself as a favorite. The attraction will play a return date in April.

The Boston Job Print and the Spring Lane Press have consolidated and are now known as C. H. Buck and Company. The firm is located at 290 Washington Street, Boston, and is one of the most complete show printing establishments in New England. Ralph Blaisdell, for many years with John Stetson, is connected with this house.

W. J. Weatherred manages the new Durant (I. T.) Opera House, which has just opened. The theatre has a large stage and seats 1,000. Durant's population is 7,000.

The Childs Memorial Hall is the name of a new theatre in Wilmington, Vt., which will open on Dec. 1, 1902. The dedication of a new and attractive hotel will take place at the same time. Wilmington is quite a summer resort, and is easily reached by rail from many of the principal New England towns. Frank A. Childs will manage the house.

Victor Morley, the comedian with the Tendenza Theatre Stock, has made many friends by his genial conversations with this organization. The local press have been most pronounced in singing his praises.

Clara Allen Bourne, who plays Mercedes in the Monte Cristo company, headed by Edmund Breese, is well served handsomely in the part, and has been receiving favorable press comment. Her stock training has stood her in good stead.

Harry and Sadie Fields are credited with having one of the hits of The Road to Ruin in Chicago recently.

Maude Leckley, who recently joined The Enterprise, is receiving high praise for her impersonation of Alan a' Dale in Robin Hood.

Manager P. P. Craft, of Conroy and Craft's Comedians, writes that the company had the pleasure of breaking the house record for a repertoire attraction at Mt. Holly, N. J., Fair Week, and that on Thursday night the receipts were the largest in the history of the theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Bartlett, after a successful season at the Summer parks, were engaged by Gower Brothers for The Minister's Daughters.

William Colvin has opened an office for the representation of artists and managers, and is now in a position to take care of a limited number of professional clients. He has made arrangements with producing managers to engage people for them. Mr. Colvin's long acquaintance with the needs of the player public and the many disadvantages under which they often labor in placing themselves and gaining the publicity which is an integral part of their profession, has led him to place his experience and ability at their service. He can be found at 1440 Broadway, suite 15.

Creature closed at the Victoria Theatre Nov. 2, and will then have played one hundred nights in New York city. He will fill an engagement at Symphony Hall, Boston, the week of Nov. 3, and then tours the New England States.

DOWN IN MUSIC ROW.

Master Rocco Docco sang "You'll Always Be the Same Sweet Girl to Me," Maude Nugent's latest song, at the Herald Square Theatre, using for the first time the beautiful slides made for the song by De Witt C. Wheeler.

At Ted Mark's Sunday concerts at the American Theatre Bill Dawson sang "I know Your Face, But Can't Call Your Name," "I'm Going to Live Anyhow Till I Die," and "Oh! Didn't He Ramble."

Master Willie Thorne is to play a part in Huckleberry Finn, and will introduce a song written for him.

Kittie Beck, with Murray and Mack's company, introduces Sloane's "Nancy" song in the third act.

Della Fox introduced a clever song at the Herald Square Sunday night concert, entitled "Baby Days," which bears the stamp of originality and should become popular.

Press notices from the West speak highly of Fanny Midgley's work with the Brown's in Town company, and particularly of her effort with "I'm Going to Live Anyhow Till I Die."

Whitman and Davis are singing Trahern and Smith's "Dollar Song" at Newark this week.

Ernest Lewis, a balladist well known in the Middle West, has been successful with Robert F. Roden's pathetic child song entitled "Please Leave the Gate Ajar."

"Only a Soldier Boy" is still gaining in popularity.

The week before Anna Held's company appeared at Reading, Pa., the orchestra under the direction of Fred R. Hoff played "The Maiden with the Dreamy Eyes" and "Mandy, Won't You Let Me Be Your Beau?" Both of these numbers will be used by her during the present season.

William Jerome, who is now one of the most successful song writers of the day, tells of submitting one of his compositions to twenty different publishers and being refused as many times. This, of course, was several years ago; now the requests he receives daily from publishers for manuscripts would keep twenty song writers busy were all the requests supplied. So much for success.

George Stenhamer is again at his old post with Shapiro, Bernstein and Company.

Burt Williams has in rehearsal J. Fred Helf's coon song, "If You Can't Be a Bull Cow, Fall In Behind," which he will feature the rest of the season.

Foy and Clark, well known to vaudevillians, will be seen in New York shortly in their new act by William Cressy. In this act Miss Clark will feature William H. Penn's touching love ballad, "There's Nobody Just Like You."

Johnson and Dean are featuring "I'll Be Busy All Next Week," and "I'll Be Your Rainbeau" this season with Rose and Fenton's big vaudeville show, and write that these songs are meeting with much public approval.

R. J. Jose will introduce J. Fred Helf's great march song, "The Spirit of '76" next week at Keith's new theatre, Philadelphia, and will feature this song the entire season.

Last week at Tony Pastor's Mills and Boecher sang William H. Penn's striking love ballad, "There's Nobody Just Like You," which Miss Boecher finds a successful medium for her art. Mills and Boecher sail for London Nov. 15.

Birds of a Feather is the title of a new sketch now being written by Al. Trahern for Barr and La Salle, who will produce it the last of November.

Hamilton S. Gordon has issued several new songs that bid fair to become popular.

Charles W. Doty, of Smith, Doty and company, is now appearing in the principal cities of the West, and writes that "Only a Soldier Boy," his composition, is very popular.

The S. R. O. sign became a fixture in Cincinnati when Primrose and Dockstader's Minstrels held forth. Manager Decker was elated at the tremendous success of his company, and recently decided to add Roden and Witt's "The City of Rest" to the admirable selection of musical numbers now used. Some of these are Cole and Johnson Brothers' "Mandy, Won't You Let Me Be Your Beau?" "Oh! Didn't He Ramble," "When the Minstrels Come to Town," "Maybe" (the last two being sung by George Primrose), "In the Valley Where the Bluebirds Sing," "I'm Going to Live Anyhow Till I Die," and "Dat Certain Party," sung by Lew Dockstader.

"Pore Lil Mose," characteristic march, published by William H. Anstead, is forging to the front and is being played by all the principal orchestras in the city.

One of the prettiest ballads written in some time is "I'll Wed You in the Golden Summertime."

Rose Carlin is singing Maude Nugent's new ballad, "You'll Always Be the Same Sweet Girl to Me" at the Dewey Theatre with the City Club company, this week.

Cole and Johnson were one of the cards at Shea's Theatre in Buffalo recently. They are singing their own compositions, "Mandy, Won't You Let Me Be Your Beau?" "Castle on the Nile," "When the Minstrels Come to Town," and their latest, "Under the Bamboo Tree."

"Those Tantalising Eyes" is a new coon song by McPherson and Bryan, writers of "Josephine, My Jo," "By Wireless Telephone," "Please Let Me Sleep," and bids fair to outrival any of their previous efforts. It is now being used as an encore winner by Harry and Sadie Fields, Kitty Harrison, Alice Leslie, Johnson and Dean, Rosalie, Cecil Spooner, and many others. "Don't Tell It to Me" is another song of the same writers which is rapidly gaining popularity.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS.

TWO SINGERS AND A SONG.

Two people are appearing at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre this week who are creating something of a sensation at each performance with a good song and the way they present it. Werden and Shepherd are the people, and this is their first appearance in New York, having come here unheralded from the West, after appearing in all the principal cities.

They are known as "America's Greatest Illustrators of Ballads," and the only act in the world using a triple dissolving machine. Having once seen and heard these clever people, you will not doubt all they claim.

Mr. Werden uses four picture machines, and a special satin drop curtain, which gives all the pictures the appearance of oil paintings, so much so that it is difficult to detect any difference from the real. He also uses mechanical effects that produce falling snow and rippling water with great effect, adding greatly to the naturalness of many views.

Possibly the most successful song they are using at present is "In the Valley of Kentucky," written by the late Tony Stanford and published by Leo Feist. This song is peculiarly adapted for pictures and gives Mr. Werden (who makes all of his own pictures and slides) a great opportunity to bring forth everything that appeals to the artistic, he having spent months, and traveled many miles, in order to find the proper views and to get suitable pictures.

Werden and Shepherd certainly stand at the top in their line of work, and feel well repaid for their pains, considering they have scored a decided hit.

DELLA FOX WITH A NEW SONG.

Della Fox introduced a new song at the Herald Square Theatre on Oct. 26, entitled "Baby Days," which she sang with her old-time cleverness, and scored an instantaneous hit. The song is by Woodward and Jerome and was given to her on short notice. The orchestration not being ready, Mr. Jerome accompanied her on the piano. In appreciation of Mr. Jerome's kindness and the fact that the song scored a hit, he is now in possession of a handsome pair of cuff buttons, set with diamonds, a present from Della Fox.

EDNA EARLIE LINDON

THE STRANGLERS OF PARIS.—"The leading roles are in the hands of Miss Edna Earlie Lindon, as Sophie Blanchard. . . . ESTHER LYON

LEADING WOMAN. Empire Stock Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Miss Esther Lyon won her way into the hearts of the audience by her wonderfully human and faithful rendering of the role of Cigarette. Never did she overdo the part, and not once did she fail to bring out the varying and contradicting shades of the little vivandiere's character. Saucy, fearless, insouciant, devil-may care, heroic, and, after all, womanly, Miss Lyon gave a living personification of one of the most engaging and piquant characters in fiction. She was applauded until hands grew weary and when the curtain went down after the last of many recalls she had achieved a triumph that was deserved.—Times, Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 31, 1902.

Press Comments upon Recent Public Performances Given in the Empire Theatre:

The students, as usual, exhibited unmistakable evidence of intelligent training and laborious rehearsal.—N. Y. Evening Post, October 25, 1901.

The first public performance of the season (Rostand's Les Romanesques) demonstrated that the Academy gives the closest attention to minutest details and educates its students in all the minor as well as the important technique of the stage.—N. Y. Dramatic News, November 2, 1901.

The performance (of Pastor Sang) given by the students was remarkable, not only because of the technical excellence displayed by the players, but because of their intelligent grasp of the characters that they portrayed.—N. Y. Dramatic Mirror, January 18, 1902.

In character delineation, in the maintenance of the atmosphere and in their delivery of lines, they suggested not only trained actors but those of much natural gift.—N. Y. Telegraph, January 11, 1902.

It was a wonderful achievement for the School to put on such a play as Bjornson's Pastor Sang, and to put it on in so finished a manner.—The Musical Leader, January 22, 1902.

The American Academy of Dramatic Arts serves us admirably as an "independent theatre." The students' work is enlivened with keen intelligence, graceful demeanor and expressive elocution.—N. Y. Sun, February 16, 1902.

The Academy gives every year much of unusual interest. Sudermann's Johannes is one of the best things the Academy has produced.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, March 21, 1902.

The productions were well worthy of the position and the traditions of the institution. The School is one of the few bright spots in the theatrical situation in America.—N. Y. Times, March 21, 1902.

MISS EVA TAYLOR

MISTRESS NELL.—"If the original Nell Gwyn was as winsome and captivating a woman as Miss Eva Taylor was last night in her impersonation, no one could blame King Charles for falling captive to her wiles. Naturally the bulk of the interest centers in the actions of Nell Gwyn, and in the quarrel scene with the king, at the Blue Boar Inn, where she measures up her rival for the king's affections, the Duchess of Portsmouth. Miss Taylor was in her element. The calm, disdainful scrutiny of her form, figure and attire, and the contemptuous reference to her stoutness, was a fine piece of acting, and brought forth rounds of applause. At the end of the act the curtain had to be raised three times."

LEADING WOMAN. Grand Opera House, Pittsburg.

MABEL MONTGOMERY

LEADING WOMAN. Vendome Theatre, Nashville, Tenn.

Mabel Montgomery as Lady Algy portrayed the character in a manner that was not only effective, but by her personality gave it a charm that ordinarily would be lacking in a young woman of Lady Algy's propensities. It is the acme of art to prevent a slight grating upon the nerves in the portrayal of such a character, but Miss Montgomery succeeds admirably in avoiding any tinge of vulgarity. She does more than this, she actually makes Lady Algy a charming and lovable person.—Nashville AMERICAN.

Mabel Montgomery as Lady Algy was fitted to her part as if in a mold. She had the devil-may-care attitude and the mangroid of a true sport, but it was so toned and colored by impulsive womanliness that the cigarette smoking feminine devotee of the turf did not stay on the taste of a refined house.—Nashville BANNER.

THIRD AVENUE THEATRE,
NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 26, 1902.

PERCY G. WILLIAMS,
Proprietor Tracy, the Outlaw, company.

DEAR SIR: Your engagement of one week at this theatre, which closes to-night in a blaze of glory, has been productive of excellent financial results, being the largest receipts taken in under my management, hundreds being turned away at each performance. Your company and music contained being first-class, I only hope you can arrange to give me a return date. With best wishes for your continued prosperity,

I remain, yours truly,
MARVIN J. DIXON,
Lessee and manager.

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.

Standard Union, Brooklyn, Oct. 7.

Tracy, the Outlaw, a stirring drama in four acts and nine scenes was presented for the first time on any stage last night at the Gotham Theatre. The production was an elaborate one, and the various stage pictures were beautiful and true to life. In point of scenery it was the greatest production ever witnessed at the Gotham. The hold-up of the express car at the water tank, and the blowing up of the car by a stick of dynamite, the escape from the penitentiary at Salem, Ore.; the fight for life in the Cascade Mountains, the escape from the Eddy ranch in Lake Creek County, Washington, and the last stand in the wheat field, under the rays of the moon, were all thrilling and realistic. Horses and bloodhounds were used with good effect. The story deals with the life of Tracy, who the play makes a noble character and the victim of another's crimes. From the time the outlaw leaves his home until the climax in the wheat field the play bristles with action, full of pathos and heart interest.

The New York Evening Journal, Oct. 24, in a double column editorial with a cartoon by Davenport, says: "At the Third Avenue Theatre in New York the life, crimes and adventures of the outlaw Tracy are worked up into a melodrama. Crowds unprofitable have packed the theatre.

"The Tracy melodrama at least is clean. Morally it lacks the indecency of the Bagbee, Irma, Du Barry and other debasing productions at the more pretentious theatres."

The lithograph paper made for this show by The Russell Morgan Print is, without question, the finest ever put on the wall for a melodrama.

Managers of theatres in the large one-night stands in the West please send open time after January 1, 1903, for my Western Tracy, the Outlaw, Co.
